JUDGE LEWIS ENJOINS CITY AT INSTANCE OF HYDRO CO.

General Manager Taff Secures Writ From Federal Court in Denver Restraining City From Interfering With Company's Rights Under the Jackson Franchise.

The city of Colorado Springs was yesterday enjoined from in any wise interfering with the Hydro Electric company in the exercise of its rights under the Jackson franchise by an order issued by Judge Robert E. Lewis in the United States circuit court at Denver. The restraining order was [illegible] City Clerk E. M. MacMillan at his home 9 South [illegible] street at 9 o'clock last night.

The latest move of the Hydro company was wholly unexpected and came as a surprise to the city officials. George A. Taff, president and general manager of the Hydro company, visited Denver yesterday and returned with Judge Lewis' order. The order was immediately placed in the hands of the sheriff's office for service.

Besides restraining the city from interfering with the Hydro company, the order cites the city to appear before the circuit court at Denver on Monday, June 4 at 10 o'clock a. m. to show cause why the preliminary injunction granted the company by the district court should not issue.

Judge Lewis' order is the outcome of the recent action of the city council in declaring the Jackson franchise forfeited by the Hydro company. The Hydro company immediately applied to the district court for a temporary order restraining the city from interfering with the Hydro's rights under the franchise. The application was granted by Judge [illegible] who was then [illegible] of the judge's [illegible] district court. The Hydro company has now applied [illegible] the [illegible] pay the [illegible] of [illegible] hearing of this petition will take place June 4.

RUSSIA IS MAKING READY FOR WAR

TRAVELER FROM SIBERIA SAYS PREPARATIONS ARE EXTENSIVE. CHINESE WOULD ATTACK RUSSIANS

VICTORIA, B. C., May 26.—M. [illegible] Vigneaux, who arrived here this morning by the steamer Monteagle after a tour in Siberia, said in an interview that Russia is making preparations in Siberia for another war. Whole troops are being sent, some others are being transported from Russia over the Trans-Siberian line. The garrisons are being strengthened particularly at Sarbin and Kabarovsk. The defenses of Vladivostok were recently strengthened by the addition of some heavy guns.

The situation with regard to China is also causing some excitement, a large force of foreign drilled Chinese having been sent to the northern borders under General Ma, the most prominent of the Chinese generals, who is exceedingly anxious to attack the Russians since their defeat by the Japanese.

FOR POSTAL TELEGRAPH

Representative Smith Says System Would Be Big Saving

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The idea of a postal telegraph has a warm advocate in Samuel M. Smith, member of congress from Michigan, who in a carefully prepared speech today in the house insisted that if the government would undertake such a system the deficit in the postal department would be almost wiped out.

"We should," he said, "have a first class postal telegraph in the United States in connection with our splendid postal facilities and the rates can be reduced at least one-half, leaving a sufficient amount to dispose of the deficit and have money left to extend the rural service to practically every home and pay the city and rural carriers a compensation fitting their services and expenses."

Whenever the postal telegraph has been adopted according to Mr. Smith, it has also been followed by a reduction in price and by an increase in the number of all kinds of messages.

Mr. Smith is authority for the statement that the Western Union octopus in one year declared dividends which reached the astonishing figures of 414 per cent.

CLAIMED THAT GOV. MAGOON WAS DRAWING TWO SALARIES

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The salary paid to Governor Charles Magoon of the Panama canal zone was the subject of considerable discussion today in the house during the consideration of the diplomatic appropriation bill. Mr. Flood, a member of the foreign affairs committee, charged that Governor Magoon was drawing two salaries, $17,500 as governor of the zone and member of the canal commission, and $10,000 as American minister to Panama.

Mr. Mann of Illinois questioned Mr. Flood's authority for this statement and Mr. Watson of Indiana and Mr. Foster of Vermont stated that the war department and the department of state both denied that Mr. Magoon is receiving a salary as minister. Mr. Flood afterward confessed that he was hasty in his deduction that Governor Magoon is receiving two salaries.

TRADES ALLIANCE WANTS ASSURANCE OF FAIR TRIAL

ST. LOUIS, May 26.—Previous to sine die adjournment today the annual conference of the Structural Building Trades alliance adopted a resolution calling upon President Roosevelt and the governor of Idaho to insure a fair trial in the cases against Moyer, Pettibone, Haywood and St. John, who are under indictment in connection with the killing of Governor Steunenberg.

LIVES WERE IMPERILED

Seven Persons Injured in N. Y. Fire, Loss Is $275,000

NEW YORK, May 26.—Seven persons were injured, one probably fatally, several hundred lives were imperiled and $[illegible] damage done by a fire that started this afternoon in the seven story buildings at [illegible] West [illegible] street, occupied chiefly by the Zuck & Leavitt & Loeb Co., manufacturers of chemicals, and spread to the adjacent buildings. The fire was caused by an explosion of a carboy in the shipping room on the first floor, where Max F. Zeedine and Fred Markwart were at work. Both were terribly burned, the former probably fatally. Fifty girls employed by the Connecticut Dynamo and Motor company on the second floor became panic stricken. About thirty of them were carried down on the freight elevator and others were rescued by firemen and policemen. Two of them were slightly burned.

Two firemen were severely hurt by the breaking of a ladder.

STANDARD OIL HEARING ENDS

COMMISSIONERS LEAVE CLEVELAND FOR WASHINGTON TO PREPARE REPORT FOR CONGRESS

CLEVELAND, May 26.—After three days spent in taking testimony concerning the affairs of the Standard Oil company, Interstate Commerce Commissioners Prouty and Clements adjourned the hearing this afternoon and left for Washington, where they are to prepare a report for congress. The report, however, will not be closed until the Standard Oil company's attorneys have been given opportunity to reply to the many statements and charges.

Today's developments were in keeping with the general line of inquiry made during the two previous days. Special Counsel Monnett endeavored to show by several witnesses that the Standard company maintained a bureau for the purpose of subsidizing Ohio newspapers, 125 of which he said were on the Standard's list.

Malcom Jennings, who conducts an advertising bureau at Lancaster, O., admitted that he made advertising contracts with Ohio newspapers for the Standard Oil company, but said they were no different from those made for any other concern. Another witness along this line was Charles J. Castle, who was for 15 years a special agent of the Standard in the Cleveland territory. He said that the literary bureau was conducted by Charles A. Ricks, who, on the witness stand yesterday, denied that any such thing existed. Castle said that he made several advertising contracts for Ricks himself.

BANKERS ARE INDICTED

Prominent People of Peoria, Ill., Are Charged With Bank Wrecking.

PEORIA, Ill., May 26.—K. Woolner, a well-known citizen and member of a wealthy family, was indicted by the May grand jury on the charge of embezzlement in connection with the wrecking of the People's Savings bank, which closed its doors after the suicide of the Rev. George Simmons. Woolner had owned the bank for many years prior to the transfer of the property to Simmons last September. Evidence before the grand jury indicated that the bank had been insolvent for years and that it had loaned all available funds to Woolner. Mr. Woolner is now an invalid at Los Angeles, but will be brought back at once.

The Rev. E. Louis Kelly of Wheaton, Ill., former partner of the Rev. Mr. Simmons in the defunct bank, and Louis Look, cashier of the bank, [illegible] in California, [illegible]

MOST IMPORTANT ASSEMBLY ENDS

PRESBYTERIANS AT DES MOINES ADJOURNED YESTERDAY TO MEET IN COLUMBUS NEXT YEAR

DES MOINES, May 26.—The 118th Presbyterian general assembly concluded its business late this afternoon and adjourned to meet next year at Columbus.

The assembly is considered to have been the most important in the history of the church because of the completion [illegible] with the Cumberland church. The [illegible] of the union by [illegible] and the appearance of delegates on the Cumberland [illegible] evident that will be [illegible] who aim [illegible] to advance the cause of Christianity.

The [illegible] of the assembly in favor of church federation is also considered an important step and it is expected that it will be followed by similar action of the [illegible] churches. The movement for union and federation is being [illegible] by leaders to be in full swing and they predict the early union of all Presbyterian churches in the United States.

The closing sessions were enlivened by several acrimonious debates, one of which came when the Rev. Dr. I. D. Moffatt offered resolutions intended to conciliate objectors to the recent union. Dr. William Lowrie of Bellefonte, Pa., objected to statements [illegible] presbyteries of the Cumberland church had been added to the rolls of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America because he said a large number of Cumberland ministers are said to be in session in St. Louis planning to continue the Cumberland church. Dr. Moffatt flashed back that the union is a fact. The resolutions were then adopted. They set forth that for fear some Cumberland presbyteries may be reluctant to acquiesce in the union because of certain misapprehensions which should be removed, the following declarations are solemnly made:

"First. That in the Presbyterian church no acceptance of doctrines is required beyond a personal faith in Jesus Christ as the son of God and Savior of the world and sincere acceptance of him as lord and master.

"Second. That ministers ruling elders and deacons in expressing approval of the Westminster confession of faith are required to assent only to the system of doctrine established therein and not to every particular statement. It is further declared no longer allowable to interpret the system of doctrine in any fatalistic sense.

"Third. That reunion works no change in the relations of communicants, ruling elders and deacons to their own particular churches, nor except in a few instances in their relations to their presbyteries and synods. The hope is also expressed that all may see that greater efficiency in the work of the church may be achieved by the union.

MOB THREATENS TO LYNCH MAN

KANSAS NATIONAL GUARD IS CALLED OUT TO KEEP WINFIELD PEOPLE FROM AVENGING CRIME

WICHITA, Kas., May 26.—A special to the Eagle from Winfield says:

A [illegible] mob has surrounded the Cowley county jail threatening to lynch Amasa Thomas, who last Wednesday clubbed Charles McEwan to death. This evening it was reported that 100 farmers from the vicinity of the crime were headed for the jail.

At the request of Sheriff Wolfe, Governor Hoch ordered out Company C of the Second infantry, Kansas National guard, stationed at Winfield. The company is now guarding the jail and had cleared the mob from the streets near the jail. The main streets are crowded with people. Colonel P. M. Helsington of Newton, commanding the Second regiment, has been ordered to have other companies in readiness to move.

COMMERCIAL TREATIES

Reichstag Adopts Resolution Relating to Negotiations With U. S.

BERLIN, May 26.—The reichstag today adopted by a large majority a resolution presented by the committee on commercial treaties with the approval of the government regarding any new treaty that may be negotiated as follows:

First. The general tariff now in force shall not be reduced below the rates already granted to countries having reciprocal treaties with Germany.

Second. Before any new treaty is concluded a meeting must be called of the commercial committee for the preparation of commercial treaties, newly created by the imperial department in order to hear views representing the various commercial and industrial interests.

Vice Chancellor Count Von Posadowski Wehner said that the result of the reciprocal treaties negotiations has been to reach a basis below which it is not wise to go. Slight modifications only are possible respecting specialties manufactured abroad and not competing with articles made in Germany, he declared.

The vice chancellor did not mention the United States, though it was obvious that the resolution relates to the prospective negotiations with the American government.

ARMY OFFICERS LEARN HOW TO PREPARE RATIONS

KANSAS CITY, May 26.—Acting under instructions from the secretary of war, 86 officers of the United States army from New York, San Antonio, Fort Riley and Fort Leavenworth came to Kansas City today to inspect the method of preparing emergency rations for the United States army. Under the directions of Major C. P. Silvers of the subsistence department of the army, 225,000 rations for emergency use by the troops in the field are being prepared at a local packing house. Each contains three cakes of bread and meat that has been compressed under a weight of 6,400 pounds, three cakes of chocolate wrapped in tinfoil, three-fourths of an ounce of fine salt and a gram of black pepper for seasoning. The weight of a can when filled is 21 ounces and its contents are sufficient to supply the wants of a soldier for one full day.

They consist of a crown for state occasions, [illegible] gold and set with brilliants, a diadem, two collars, one of pearls and the other of rubies and sapphires, a pair of golden bracelets, a pair of pendants and a large diamond brooch. One of the curious is a miniature automobile that opens to show the portrait of the king.

The government has shown exceptional consideration for the envoy of the United States, Frederick Wallingford Whiteridge, as the palace of the Countess Pino Hermoso, which has been placed at his disposal, was the only castle assigned to persons outside the royal houses. The quarters of the American envoy are being [illegible] prepared, the furnishings being part of the Spanish exhibit at the Paris exposition of 1900. LISTLESS DAY IN HOUSE

Champ Clark Will Oppose Modification of Exclusion Law.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—During the course of a listless day's legislation on the diplomatic and consular bill in the house today Champ Clark of Missouri stated that he had heard whisperings that the Chinese exclusion law was to be modified to affect all classes of Chinese with the exception of coolie labor. He gave notice that if there was any such intention on the part of the majority he would fight such a change to the last ditch, that he had been somewhat instrumental in putting the Chinese exclusion law on the statute books and that for one he would not agree to its modification.

The house after making a few amendments to the bill at 5:40 adjourned until noon on Monday.

HEALTH CONDITIONS ON ISTHMUS ARE EXCELLENT

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Health conditions on the isthmus of Panama during April were excellent, according to a letter just received by the isthmian canal commission from Governor Magoon. The number of sick averaged but 16 for every 1,000 persons.

No yellow fever has been reported in the isthmus since Nov. [illegible], and as the life of the stegomyia or yellow fever mosquito is only 90 days, Governor Magoon says the isthmus does not seem to be in danger of infection. As there is yellow fever at Bocas Del Toro, Panama, and at ports on the west coast of South America, the health officers in the canal zone are [illegible] to protect the [illegible]

REVOLT IN RUSSIA SEEMS INEVITABLE

Imperial Negative Is Pronounced on Cherished Hopes of the People's Representatives. Trouble Is Expected When People Learn That Amnesty Is Denied.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 26.—At the end of a memorable seven hour session the lower house today indignantly rejected the government's policy as presented by Premier Goremykin and [illegible] several dissenting voices [illegible]

This practically throws down the gauntlet to the bureaucracy, which [illegible] and for the retirement of the present cabinet and [illegible] supersession by a ministry approved by a majority in the house.

[illegible] the conflict between the crown and the nation appears inevitable. While [illegible] the appearance of delivering an ultimatum, the government seems to have [illegible] general impression is that the country is on the verge of a [illegible] struggle which may be delayed [illegible]

Dispatches from the interior indicate that the struggle may be inaugurated Monday with a general strike when the people learn that all amnesty has been refused.

Emperor's Prerogative.

While the premier's statement promised cooperation with the lower house so far as the latter does not transgress the limits of the fundamental laws, it recognized the agrarian question as paramount, proposing to remedy the difficulty in land through the operation of an agrarian migration [illegible] It proposed the introduction of universal compulsory education [illegible] administration and [illegible] liberties. Premier Goremykin's statement, however, returned a non possumus on the chief questions raised by the house. It declared that the [illegible] and exceptional laws cannot be withdrawn until murder and terrorism cease. The expropriation of appanages of the crown and church and private lands was declared inadmissible. The right of investigating administrative acts, the statement declared, belongs to the crown, the house having only the power of interpellation. Amnesty, Premier Goremykin said, is solely the prerogative of the emperor.

Free Rein to Passion.

[illegible] was the government's reply to the address of the house and [illegible] words seemed to arouse [illegible] resentment in the hearts [illegible] members of the house. The Constitutional Democratic leaders for the first time gave free rein to passion and with flaming words orator after orator denounced the government's programme and said that the ministry must give way to a cabinet in which the people can have confidence. M. Roditcheff announced that the government's reply had dashed to the ground all hope of working in harmony with the administration. M. Kovalesky enacted the role of Mirabeau, practically paraphrasing the Frenchman's words: "We are here by the will of the people and nothing but bayonets can disperse us," while half a dozen peasant members hurled defiance at the ministers.

[illegible] Heyden, the leader of the right, deserted the government, saying that inasmuch as it had refused to redeem its promise to repeal the exceptional laws his vote also was for censure.

Shifted Responsibility.

The resolution of censure as adopted provides that the house shall proceed with the order of the day Monday, thus adroitly placing upon the government responsibility for the next move.

For the movement is indicated by a communication issued by the official

ST. PETERSBURG, May 26.—Before a house more crowded than on the opening day, with every member in his seat and the press and public galleries crowded, Premier Goremykin read to the lower house of parliament the expected declaration of the government's policy, pronouncing the imperial negative on the most cherished hopes and plans of the people's representatives. In the imperial box sat Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaievich, following the proceedings with the keenest interest. There was scarcely standing room in the section assigned to members of the upper house and the premier and the entire cabinet, with the exception of Vice Admiral Birileff, minister of marine, and Lieutenant General Rudiger, minister of war, occupied seats on the ministerial benches.

Exciting Scenes.

The scene before the opening was one of great but suppressed excitement. All present were aware that the response would utterly fail to meet the wishes of the lower house, and a hum of eager discussion as to the effect of the resolutions expressing lack of confidence in the government, which the Constitutional Democrats and the labor party had drafted in advance, filled the hall and corridors. The tinkle of President Mouromtseff's bell calling the session to order stilled the house to instant silence, whereupon, without waiting for further preliminaries, Premier Goremykin mounted to the tribune and began reading the governmental declarations. He evidently was not used to public speeches, as he labored under a considerable strain and spoke in a low, weak voice, which at times, though deathly silence prevailed, failed to reach the rear of the great hall save as an indistinct muttering. The reading, which was as rapid as if the premier had been in a hurry to get through with a disagreeable task, lasted eighteen minutes and was interrupted only by pauses to swallow several glasses of water. The members in the meanwhile sat stolidly silent and when the premier had finished and bowed to the assembly, not a murmur of approval was heard throughout the house, where the [illegible] began to distribute printed [illegible] of the speech.

Flung Down Gauntlet.

A wonderful scene followed when M. Roditcheff, the leader of the Constitutional Democrats, mounted the rostrum to reject in behalf of his party the government's reply. With burning words he flung down the gauntlet to the government, thunders of applause greeting his sallies of defiance.

The Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaievich shrank back into a corner of the imperial box as the orator flayed the administration, and the premier and the other members of the cabinet seemed to shrink lower in their chairs. When M. Roditcheff turned toward the benches occupied by the ministry and, with arm outstretched, menacingly declared that "it is not the government, but the representatives of the people here assembled who must decide what is best for the welfare of the country," the members were wild with enthusiasm.

Time and again the house roared with ironical laughter at the orator's sarcastic denunciations of the policy of the government.

Said Hopes Were Dashed.

M. Roditcheff said the members of the lower house had assembled prepared to work and forget the past, but today their hopes had been dashed to the ground. He denied, in behalf of his party, the premier's statement that they were attempting to under-

SMELTER TRUST TO CONTROL CRIPPLE CREEK PRODUCERS?

Recent Developments in Gold Camp Railroads and Colorado City Mills, Coupled With Reported Negotiations for Mining Properties Leads to Belief That Guggenheims May Be Trying to Acquire Control of the Cripple Creek Output.

Portland stock opened at $1.49, sold down to $1.45, and strengthened to $1.50 at the close yesterday. The 10,000 shares traded in were sold by "Bat" Masterson, broker for James F. Burns.

With physical condition of the mine known to be good, there is considerable speculation as to the cause of the attack on Portland. Burns is selling, what is his reason?

Some claim that Mr. Burns' enmity toward Irving Howbert, who succeeded him as president of the company, actuated the attack. Burns has been persistent in fighting the present Portland administration, but it is an open question whether he would be willing to sacrifice good hard cash in such large amounts without seeing returns certain to come. Burns owns 600,000 shares of Portland stock and the 30-cent decline caused by the throwing of stock on the market represents a probable loss by him of $18,000.

From other sources comes a report that the smelter trust, which has taken over the milling industry in Colorado, is to secure control of practically all of the large producers in the Cripple Creek district. It was rumored several months ago that this gigantic deal was being formulated and the developments of the last few days give [illegible] indication that the project is to be put into execution.

gun when Mr. Burns was president of the Portland, and doubtless he knew something of the plans of the smelter trust. If the deal was pending, then Mr. Burns doubtless has kept an eye on negotiations.

Burns has had hopes of regaining power in the Portland company. With the smelter trust owning control, operating under trust methods, not only would his chance of getting control be destroyed, but he could literally be squeezed out of his holdings at the price the trust wished to give.

had taken over the mill trust, following, as it did, the news that the Cripple Creek Central railroad had been purchased by people connected with the United States Reduction and Refining company, has given color to the indications that the Guggenheims are preparing to gain absolute control of the most famous mining camp in the state. Reports from the gold camp are to the effect that negotiations are pending for the sale of the Granite Gold Mining company's property, now the second largest producer in the district, and others of the [illegible] C. C. Hamlin, who is heavily interested in the Granite, is named as one of the directors of the Cripple Creek Central railroad system, the control of which was recently bought by C. M. MacNeill and associates.

By buying the Portland [illegible] the smelter trust would have [illegible] of all the mills with the single [illegible] tion of the Golden Cycle [illegible] now being constructed in Colorado [illegible] J. A MARVELOUS OPTICAL TRIUMPH.

THE GREATEST DISCOVERY OF THE 20TH CENTURY

After fifty years of time and labor spent by the most expert lens grinders of the world in trying to perfect a lens that would give two foci in one without any prismatic effect or spherical aberration, it was left to science to step in and supply the needed lens.

Do you understand the great blessing that this invention has been to glass-wearers? It means a saving of thousands of eyes, for more eyes are injured by badly constructed lenses than in any other way. By allowing yourself to be fitted by incompetent Opticians who know nothing of the process of constructing the lenses you wear, you are laying your eyesight liable to injuries which, when once sustained, can never be undone.

KRYPTOK LENSES are being worn by thousands of glass wearers, and are being recommended by all the leading Occulists as the most beneficial lens for the sight that the world has ever known. KRYPTOK LENSES are very neat in appearance, and can be worn by the most delicate eye, as the annoying features of the old-style bifocal have been entirely done away with.

KRYPTOK LENSES require the most skilled lens grinders that the country affords.

When you get KRYPTOKS you get the best. There are none just as good.

In addition to our own optician, we have engaged the services of the Columbian Bifocal Co.'s expert, of Denver, who will be with us one week, beginning Monday, May 28, whose services you may have with no cost to you whatever.

agency at midnight the ministry is hesitating in a dilemma, being ready neither to resign nor to dismiss parliament. The communication says:

"We are able to announce authoritatively that the rumors of a dissolution of parliament are unfounded. The parliament will sit until the middle of June, when it will take a vacation. The dismissal of the ministers is a matter exclusively for the unfettered decision of the sovereign. The speech of the minister of justice at today's sitting of the house was an expression of his personal view, given on his own initiative."

The resolution of lack of confidence in the government was drafted by the labor group. It is as follows:

"The declaration of the premier heard today by parliament contains the decisive declaration that the government in no wise wishes to meet the demands of the people and the execution of a law of liberty and civil rights enumerated in the address of the house in reply to the speech from the throne, and without fulfillment of which pacification of the country and successful work by the house is impossible. By its refusal to satisfy the popular demands the government clearly shows its disregard of the real interests of the people and its present unwillingness to remove from the shadow of new disasters a country which is harrassed by poverty, lawlessness and the continued unpunished arbitrariness of the authorities.

The lower house of parliament considers that it is its plain duty to proclaim its complete distrust of an irresponsible ministry. It regards as a most necessary condition to the pacification of the country and fruitful work by parliament the immediate resignation of the present cabinet and its replacement by a ministry possessing its confidence. Parliament thereupon votes to continue with the regular order of the day."

mine the first principle of the government, the inviolability of property. Then the speaker in detail took up the government's answer. He dismissed as unsatisfactory the minister's promise to hereafter obey the law.

What law, asked M. Roditcheff.

The same law which now permits wholesale arrests and executions?

The promise of substituting for the immediate release of political prisoners the discretion of the local authorities was characterized by M. Roditcheff as a travesty upon amnesty which would simply perpetuate the arbitrariness against which the nation was crying out. The people want liberty and not prison and exile.

M. Roditcheff concluded with a demand for the retirement of the bureaucratic cabinet and the creation of a responsible ministry from the people's chosen representatives. He said:

Adjourned Until Monday

The government... country... impossible for it to rest... it with... the cooperation of the people... and we... a... turning again to the ministerial benches... obey the dictates of your conscience and give way to a ministry in which the nation... have confidence.

As M. Roditcheff ended the ministers sprang to their feet and left the house... minutes wildly cheered him and his speech.

Prof. Maxonsky of Kharkoff attacked the assertions of the ministry regarding the principle of inviolability of property, saying that obligatory repurchase of property does not infringe this principle. In conclusion he said:

We shall continue our labors without fear and little force only will make us leave the house.

Count Heyden said he had hoped to work peacefully in the house, but the ministerial program had destroyed his hopes. The ministry was the very opposite of that government which a year ago expressed itself as in favor of repealing the exceptional laws. Count Heyden's speech was loudly cheered.

The house then adjourned until Monday.

MADE FROM NATIVE ROOTS.

SAFE AND RELIABLE.

That the roots of many native plants, growing wild in our American forests, possess remarkable properties for the cure of human maladies is well proven. Even the untutored Indian had learned the curative value of some of these and taught the early settlers their uses. The Indian never liked work so he wanted his squaw to get well as soon as possible that she might do the work and let him hunt. Therefore, he dug "papoose root" for her, for that was their great remedy for female weaknesses. Dr. Pierce uses the same root—called Blue Cohosh—in his "Favorite Prescription," skillfully combined with other agents that make it more effective than any other medicine in curing all the various weaknesses and painful derangements peculiar to women.

Many afflicted women have been saved from the operating table and the surgeon's knife by the timely use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Tenderness over the lower pelvic region with backache, spells of dizziness, faintness, bearing down pains or distress should not go unheeded. A course of "Favorite Prescription" will work marvelous benefit in all such cases, and generally effect a permanent cure if persisted in for a reasonable length of time. The "Favorite Prescription" is a harmless agent, being wholly prepared from native medicinal roots without a drop of alcohol in its make up, whereas all other medicines, put up for sale through druggists for woman's peculiar ailments contain large quantities of spirituous liquors, which are very harmful, especially to delicate women. "Favorite Prescription" contains neither alcohol nor harmful habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on each bottle wrapper. It is a powerful invigorating tonic, imparting health and strength in particular to the organs distinctly feminine. For weak and sickly women, who are "worn-out," or debilitated, especially for women who work in store, office or school room, who sit at the typewriter or sewing machine, or bear heavy household burdens, and for nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will prove a priceless benefit because of its health restoring and strength-giving power.

GERMAN JOURNALISM

Author Says Only in U. S. Are Papers Treated Fairly

BERLIN, May 26.—A subject of widespread discussion in Germany at present is the relation of newspapers to public opinion, foreign policy of the German empire and to Germany's internal and social developments. Prof. Adolph Koch, head of the department of journalism of the University of Heidelberg, has written to the Associated Press that the number of students, 130, has never been so large since the establishment of the course in 1895. The course has been divided into subdivisions for the study of the history of journalism, public opinion, the character of the press in Germany and practical newspaper work. The principal journalistic organizations of Berlin have systematized the relations of the papers with the government.

An anonymous book entitled The Press and Germany's World Policy has just been published and is widely commented upon. It discusses in detail the treatment of newspapers in Germany and various other countries, says that only in the United States is a spirit of fairness shown and asserts that there is much to be desired in this regard throughout Europe. The diplomacy of Germany, it is claimed, is continually brought under suspicion and its results are frittered away by the press. Finally the inferior position in energy and enterprise of the German newspapers is contrasted with the papers of the other countries.

THROWING THE SIDELIGHTS ON CONGRESSIONAL INCIDENTS

(BY OSCAR KING DAVIS.)

WASHINGTON, May [illegible] has reached its most critical stage [illegible] [illegible] ever thing [illegible] from first [illegible] [illegible] were [illegible] hope [illegible] be in the [illegible] familiarity with the entire subject. [illegible] that is a subject on which he was [illegible] spared his thought [illegible] three weeks [illegible]

Of all [illegible] behind the scheme [illegible] would be that the same bill would offer him a wide range of separate subjects and if he chose to [illegible] his full three weeks on each one it would be as bad as if he were not prepared at all. [illegible]

Fun With Filibustering

Uncle Joe's Quorum

[illegible] member [illegible]

[illegible] young Mr. Beall of Texas vastly interested in the [illegible] of the process ventured mildly to inquire what method was employed in reaching the result.

"Do you count them singly or in groups?" he asked.

In blank [illegible] replied Uncle Joe off the bat [illegible] quorum present.

This morning, when [illegible] stood [illegible] head the speaker swept the floor with his eyes [illegible]

One hundred and ninety have been counted without completing the count.

"No one could tell what would be the result if it were completed," responded Williams.

Brand New Feature

The other day Williams introduced a brand new feature in filibustering. The oldest inhabitant had never heard of it before, not even John Chancey, who has been in the employ of the house for fifty consecutive years. It was as simple as Hop Scotch but extremely effective. A roll call had just been completed on Williams' demand, the recapitulation had been finished and the pairs announced. It was time to report the vote, when the Democrats left their seats and flocked down into the well directly in front of the speaker's desk. There the first of them inquired how he was recorded. Uncle Joe looked at him with a pained expression and directed the clerk to ascertain. As soon as the answer was made, the Democrat said:

"Mr. Speaker, I desire to change my vote."

Thereupon the clerk was directed to call his name and he voted the other way. The whole formula took about half a minute. As soon as it was ended with the first one another made the same request, and then another and then the next. So it went, until it took two pages of the record to print the list. It took about twenty minutes to satisfy those who wanted to change and it showed the house a fine new trick.

Four Cylinder. Model "S"

Four Cylinder Model S. Oldsmobile

The following is a quotation from a letter received by us from Mr. Wm. H. Bartlett, Jr., of Chicago:

I have used my Model S Oldsmobile for nearly a month and am very much delighted with it. During this time it has always been reliable with the exception of grinding one valve and adjusting carburetor. I have had absolutely no trouble with it. The engine is very flexible and will throttle down to about four miles per hour on high gear; at the same time the car has more speed than I shall ever use and power enough to carry five people in the hills at 1 mile per hour. Altogether I am very glad that I selected an Oldsmobile Model S.

ELKS' BAND SECURED TO PLAY AT PYTHIAN BARBECUE JULY 4

Preparations are being made by Pike's Peak company No. 10, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, to entertain between 5,000 and 6,000 people at the Green Mountain Falls barbecue on July 4. In addition to four special trains from Colorado Springs, specials will be run from Denver and Pueblo, arriving at the mountain resort about 11 o'clock in the morning and leaving at 6 o'clock in the evening.

The various committees are working faithfully to provide many amusement features. S. S. Goshen is organizing a baseball team and in addition to this game there will be tub races and other aquatic sports, a sack race, potato race and contests of strength and skill. The meat for the barbecue, beef, pork, mutton, etc., has been donated, and the uniformed Rankers promise there will be some yellow-legged chicken if they have to steal them. A contract has been made with the Elks' band of 40 pieces to furnish music during the day and Barnes' orchestra will play for the dancers on the big pavilion which is to be rebuilt.

W. C. Whitthorn has been appointed chairman of the advertising committee, Vice Captain John Grant. The executive committee consists of Captain Grant, Grand Chancellor O. B. Bennett, Captain W. A. Davis, A. L. Bottomley, W. A. Day, J. H. Thedinga and M. Masterson.

Company No. 10 is expected to derive material funds for its trip to the grand lodge meeting in New Orleans in October. The company has made one of the best percentage showings in competitive drills during the last two grand lodge sessions of any company in the west.

HORSE IS REPLEVINED

A Disturbance Charge Results From a Horse Trade

Not being satisfied with a horse trade made last Tuesday, Jerry J. O'Driscoll is alleged to have taken possession of the horse he formerly owned by force, and he is now under arrest on a charge of disturbing the peace, and the horse in question is held by Constable W. P. Larabee under a replevin.

It is alleged that O'Driscoll and W. E. Whitcraft, who conducts a stable on West Cucharas street, traded horses last Tuesday. Yesterday O'Driscoll became dissatisfied with the "swap" and went to the Whitcraft stables, where he is alleged to have taken his former horse by force and turned the Whitcraft animal into the corral.

When Whitcraft returned and learned of O'Driscoll's action he swore out a warrant before Justice W. N. Dale for O'Driscoll's arrest and also replevined the horse. Constable Larrabee arrested O'Driscoll and took possession of the horse pending the outcome of the replevin suit. O'Driscoll was later released under $200 bond.

BOY AND GIRL TO BE WEDDED

GROOM IS EIGHTEEN YEARS OLD AND THE BRIDE IS ONLY FOURTEEN.

PARENTS GIVE THEIR CONSENT TO WEDDING OF RICHARD M. TUCKER AND CLARA A. MORGAN.

Richard M. Tucker, 18 years old, and Clara A. Morgan, 14 years old, were issued a marriage license yesterday by Marion Jones, deputy county clerk. Tucker lives at [illegible] East Willamette avenue and is employed by Douglas & Hetherington, architects. Miss Morgan is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Morgan, [illegible] East Dale street.

When the two young people went to the county clerk's office yesterday they were accompanied by Mrs. Constance D. Morgan, mother of the prospective bride. She said that she had come to give her consent to the marriage of her 14-year-old daughter. "Cupid" Clerk Jones asked Tucker how old he was and, upon receiving eighteen for an answer, informed him that he would have to get his parents' consent to the marriage. Young Tucker immediately asked permission to use the county clerk's telephone, and after an hour's wait, Mrs. Sarah J. Tucker, mother of the young man, arrived at the court house and gave her consent that her boy should wed.

COUNTY'S VALUATION

Will Approximate $24,000,000, Showing a Slight Decrease.

After two months' work on the part of twenty deputy assessors, the assessed valuation of El Paso county for the year 1906 has been made and fixed upon. The work of totaling the deputies' figures has not been completed, but it is known that the valuation will be slightly less than that of last year. The total valuation in 1905 was $24,156,000, and this year it will be a trifle below the twenty-four million dollar mark. The decrease is largely due to the depreciation in values of Colorado City's mills, some of the more valuable machinery in these mills having been moved away.

Biliousness and Constipation.

"For years I was troubled with biliousness and constipation, which made life miserable for me. My appetite failed me. I lost my usual force and vitality. Pepsin preparations and cathartics only made matters worse. I do not know where I should have been today had I not tried Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. The effects were simply marvelous. The tablets relieve the ill feeling at once, strengthen the digestive functions, purify the stomach, liver and blood, helping the system to do its work naturally. They bring back new life and energy, a bright eye, a clear brow and a happy heart."—Mrs. Rosa Potts, Birmingham, Ala. These tablets are for sale by all druggists.

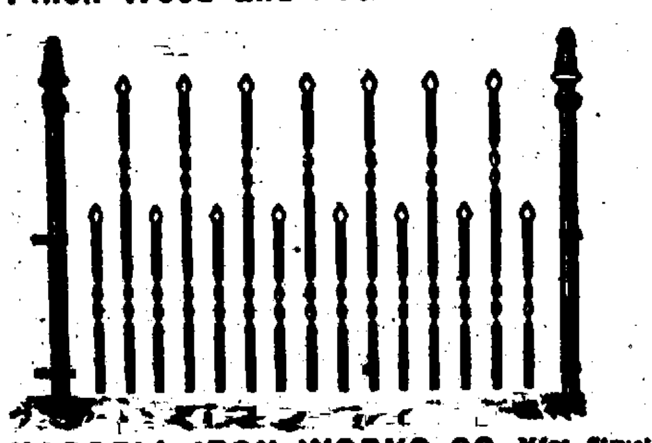

TEACHERS' ENTERTAINMENT.

Mrs. L. E. Parr delightfully entertained the teachers of Columbia school at her home, 1109 North Institute street, on Friday evening. After various amusements, delicious light refreshments were served. MADE DARING ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE JAIL

ALLEGED DIAMOND THIEVES FOUGHT POLICE OFFICERS.

MADE BREAK FOR LIBERTY WHILE BEING CONVEYED TO COUNTY JAIL IN PATROL WAGON.

John Freitig and R. J. Livingston, two alleged diamond thieves who were arrested by the police Wednesday after they had snatched a $40 diamond stud from the shirt front of J. M. Bond, made a daring attempt to escape from custody yesterday afternoon while being conveyed from the city jail to the county jail in the patrol wagon. The men both made a dash for liberty at the same time and did not give up the fight until they had been knocked down by Police Sergeant Charles S. Railsback and Patrolman Horace Shelby, who were taking them to the county jail.

When the patrol wagon arrived at the county jail, Officer Shelby got out and motioned to Livingston to follow. Livingston did as directed, but as he alighted he made a lunge for Shelby's throat. At the same instant, Freitig shoved Railsback over the railing of the wagon and reached for the sergeant's revolver.

Shelby, who is a big, brawny officer noted about town for his strength, knocked Livingston to the ground with one blow, but Freitig was not so easily downed. After wrestling around in the patrol wagon for several minutes, Sergeant Railsback succeeded in getting the better of his opponent and the man who snatched the diamond from Bond's shirt was soon lying prostrate in the bottom of the wagon. During the fight, the horses attached to the wagon became frightened and Driver E. G. Nally was kept busy preventing a runaway.

Freitig and Livingston are considered two of the smoothest crooks who ever visited the city by local detectives. An attempt was made to photograph them as they were taken from the city jail yesterday, but the men were "wise" to the game and kept their faces covered with their handkerchiefs. They did not remove the handkerchiefs until they made the bold attempt to escape.

Mr. Bond, from whom they attempted to make the robbery, refused to stay here to prosecute the men and has gone east, but Chief Adams will attempt to have him either return or make a deposition in the east for use when the men are tried in the district court. Both men are charged with highway robbery and the police department will make a strong effort to send them to the penitentiary.

RICHARD MAY FINED IN POLICE COURT FOR CRUELTY—ANIMAL COVERED WITH WOUNDS.

On a charge of cruelty to animals, Richard May was convicted in the police court yesterday morning and fined $5 and costs. He will work out the time on the city rock pile. It is charged that while breaking a pony to ride, May whipped the horse with baling wire until the animal was covered with wounds. The case was worked up by J. F. Neff, in charge of the El Paso county branch of the State Bureau of Child and Animal Protection.

THE EMPIRE.

Patsey Doyle, the renowned and versatile comedian, will appear at the Empire the coming week. In the large eastern cities this bare announcement is all that is necessary to insure large audiences. As a comedian, Mr. Doyle stands head and shoulders over his contemporaries. He is a head-liner for sure. He must be seen to be appreciated.

Gladstone Sisters, marvelous acrobats, the Great Southern Quartet, in old plantation songs and dances; Marckley, probably the foremost banjoist in the world; Mr. Purdy in the latest illustrated song, will all contribute to the entertainment of the patrons.

Last week the moving pictures showed San Francisco as it was before the late calamity, and it would be apropos to show the present deplorable condition of the city this week. Whatever the pictures may be, however, it is safe to assume they will be entertaining.

Patrons of the Empire are being treated to entertainment of the caliber seen on the large eastern vaudeville circuits. Shows commanding prices as high as $1.00 on the Orpheum circuit in Denver can be seen here for ten cents. The show this week is very good and is entitled to the patronage of the people.

Ode

For the Pike Centennial
Written by Charles J. Pike

A copy of the ode written by Charles J. Pike of New York city, a son of the famous Zebulon Pike, to be sung in memory of the discovery of the Pikes Peak centennial celebration has been received by Secretary Ralph Music for the ode is being composed by Rubin Goldmark. The ode is as follows:

Ode to Colorado

Oh mighty Peak, rough-hewn and signed
By master hands simplicity
What monuments to human mind
Conceived or built compared to thee
When man's last monument is read
And crumbles in the breath of time,
Thou still shalt rear thy hoary head
Above the burning tides of Time

'Twas Pike the pilgrim first unfurled
The curtain of three thousand miles—
Then left thee to enchant the world
Dismayed he left to mountains wiles.
But tho he won the kiss of fame
In battle for his country's heart
'Twas here she carved his simple name
On Natures masterpiece of art.

Here, where not many years ago
Brave Indian brothers in their pride,
Oft bent the battle's biting bow
Or beat the swift deer side by side.
Great cities smile upon the plains
Sweet seas of golden grain increase,
Man burrows in thy metal veins
And hammers sing the song of peace.

Fair Colorado may thy store
Increase as year on year unrolls,
Blest be thy homes where every door
With hospitality unfolds
Peace to each matron and each sire
Bliss to thy maidens true of heart,
Success to all who shall aspire
To sow thy field or reap thy mart.

MATRIMONIAL TANGLE

Former Husband Gives Bride Away at the Altar.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., May 26.—Benton Harbor is the scene of one of the strangest and most interesting matrimonial tangles and romances in the history of the west. On every hand can be heard the question:

"Will society receive or ignore Mrs. Alta Conger-Conger-Schafer-Hopper, the daughter of F. D. Conger of this city, niece of the former United States minister to China, and for years a social favorite here and elsewhere, upon her return from her latest honeymoon?"

Interest is added to the remarkable story of the beautiful woman's matrimonial ventures by the fact that her present husband is a partner of Chas. J. Roger Harmon, while the former husband attended the ceremony and gave his former wife to the other man.

EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH IN A SERIOUS CONDITION

BERLIN, May 26.—It is believed in Vienna, declares the correspondent of the Morgenpost that the Austrian emperor is in a precarious condition from an attack of intestinal inflammation. Although it is officially stated that the emperor is in normal health, it is known that he always objects to his condition being made public, and credit is given to the reports of his illness in all quarters.

World's Greatest Clairvoyant Astral Dead Trance Medium Psychic Seer and Healer

Stands Alone in Her Magnificent Power of Reading the Future of Humankind.

Coming from a race of people who have been clairvoyant for thousands of years, her reading of your past and present, as well as your future life, will amaze you. She is acknowledged by press and public wherever she has been to be the greatest clairvoyant they have ever consulted.

Strangely fascinating are the words that come from the cultivated lips of this most interesting woman, whose journey of life has already taken her through all the renowned psychic schools of Egypt, India and Europe. It seems indeed, as if her knowledge must come from that mysterious world of which we all would know, yet longing cannot know. She looks as far away into the dim, mysterious future—the great beyond—across the dark chasm which separates the human body from the flitting soul—and that which is, to be is told. The separated are brought together, foes are made friends, lost property is recovered, the mist is brushed away from business ventures, the hand is so guided that failures are averted, the earth's surface is explored, its treasures laid bare to her mysteriously perceptive mind, and while she gives names, dates, facts and her visitor sits dumfounded at the revelations she makes to him. She is surely a woman of the present time.

She will teach you how to fascinate any one you desire, how to make your enemies your friends, causes a speedy marriage with the one of your choice, gives you good luck and makes you successful in your business, removes evil influences, reunites the separated, gives you lucky numbers, settles the old estates that time has placed beyond the lawyer's [illegible].

WHAT IS The Shepard Treatment for Consumption?

How is It Used? What Are Its Effects?

We are so often asked about the nature of this treatment for tuberculosis, as to what it is, and how taken, so that we take pleasure in answering in this way. First of all we must remember that this disease, consumption, is a destructive disease. It breaks down and destroys the lung tissues. One would think that this process might be stopped, and the lungs healed with medicine taken into the stomach, but for centuries this has been tried by the most able physicians, but without effect, so the only hope lies in a mechanical treatment. The climate treatment is of this class, but while it is good, it does not go far enough, and often fails because it does not open the air cells that are closed and made useless by the disease. It needs help and we have found by years of experience that the help it needs must be mechanical also in its action. It must be mild and safe and healing in its application. This is exactly what the Shepard Treatment is. When the climate would encapsulate the disease and lock up the bacilli in a fibrous capsule where it is all ready to break out again at the first approach of fever or bad colds, etc., it prevents the covering up of the bacilli and instead heals the diseased places. The patient uses an instrument that he has in his own room. It is used four times a day by inhaling into the lungs an antiseptic medicine that reduces the inflammation and makes all of the lung tissues aseptic. In this disease there are always a great many air cells that are inflamed or are filled with the mucus which is the product of the bacilli. These cells are very soon opened and as the air passes into them it affords a sense of comfort and relief that is very grateful to the patient. The first effect of the treatment is to increase the sputa because it clears this mucus out of the air cells at once. Gradually the character of the discharge changes from a thick yellow matter to a light colored mucus. When this change takes place the fever and chills which are caused by this poisonous matter, begin to stop and the patient begins to gain strength. They frequently gain flesh rapidly also. The use of this instrument is pleasant and affords a refreshing, clean, healthy feeling in the chest. In addition to the use of the instrument the patient is supplied with such remedies as are indicated to aid the process of digestion and assimilation, also to more quickly control fever, night sweats and chills, and to give strength. Because this treatment makes a permanent healing instead of a covering up of the diseased areas in the lung, a patient can very soon go back to their homes in the east and by continuing it there until the lung is strong and every part of it well, they can live there with perfect safety. It is not an expensive treatment. In fact very few are so poor that they cannot take it. Call and examine it. Consultations and examinations are free. Offices in the Barnes Building. Office hours from 10 to 12 a. m., and from 2 to 4 p. m. Sundays by appointment only.

STRONG ATTACK ON FRATERNITIES

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 26.—Obscene songs, smoking, drunkenness, gambling, idleness, extravagance, indulgence, love of display and general social viciousness are some of the indictments charged against high school fraternities and sororities and other secret organizations by Mrs. A. J. Jackman of Chicago before the Illinois Mothers' congress. The bitter arraignment of the organizations met with demonstrative approval from the 300 mothers present, many of whom stood up and shouted their approbation.

"Such organizations are not needed," declared Mrs. Jackman. "They are mere imitations of college societies without their justification. They are selfish, unsocial and exclusive. Secrecy among young pupils is dangerous. A reasonable chaperonage is necessary.

"Fraternities tend toward early sophistication, manipulation of community politics and experimentation in vice. They are undemocratic. They cause a too early fixing of social choice. The secret society is narrowing. High school students should meet many people of varied character.

"Out of this rises the school boss," she continued, "whose pernicious activity hides too often behind the fair names of school spirit. These societies choose largely persons of wealth, social position and striking personal gifts. This develops exclusive snobbery and neglect of many schoolmates."

Mrs. Jackman advocated as a remedy for the evils separate clubhouses for boys and girls open to all students on equal terms, the development of clubs of objective interest, such as literary, debating, art, music collections, outing, athletics, dramatic, scientific and the like; school parties managed and chaperoned by a combination of students, faculty and parents, and a series of home parties.

MOFFAT ROAD MORTGAGE IS FILED IN GLENWOOD

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, May 26.—The first mortgage of the Denver, Northwestern & Pacific railroad was filed in Glenwood today. It is a voluminous document and is given to secure a loan of $2,500,000 and will draw interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, both principal and interest payable in gold coin in New York city. This but furnished another proof that this road will connect with the Denver & Rio Grande at some point in this county, probably at Dotsero, as has been freely predicted.

HEALTH SEEKER WAS OVERCOME BY ALTITUDE

DENVER, May 26.—Overcome by the high altitude, Hyman Pelman, who came to Denver in search of health, was found in an insane condition on the street yesterday, and after being examined by Police Surgeon McGilvray, he was sent to the county hospital. Pelman believed he was being pursued by evil spirits and raved constantly on the way to the hospital. He is 49 years old and came from Anniston, Ala., a few days ago, suffering with consumption. He is a member of the Odd Fellows lodge, and his friends in the south have been notified of his condition.

Whiskey and Beer Habit

Nearly every day we hear something good about Orrine, the only guaranteed cure for the whiskey and beer habit. The other day a lady told us that a person in whom she is greatly interested has discontinued drinking since using Orrine. This treatment does not detain the user from work and is a simple remedy, easy to use, and so sure to cure drunkards and stop the fearful craving for drinking that we sell it under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.

Orrine is in two forms. No. 1 to be given secretly, and No. 2 for those who wish to be cured. Each form costs $1.00 and both are guaranteed. We would not recommend it if we had not assured ourselves of its great value. Mail orders filled. The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C., or the D. Y. Butcher Drug Co.

The home laxative should be safe

This one is. A good physic should always be kept in the house. Nearly every affliction to which the human body is heir, from a slight cold to a severe attack of fever or kidney trouble, is in a great degree due to improper bowel action and can be more quickly relieved and cured by cleansing the bowels than in any other manner.

The home remedy should be safe for all members of the family who may be required to use it. The average physic, such as the alleged mineral waters, which are nothing more or less than preparations of salts and carbonated water—similar to soda water—candied pellets and pills, will move the bowels, but in doing so they often leave the patient weak. No one should ever take a physic which makes him weak. If such a remedy is continued a terrible habit is created which will make it necessary that a physic be administered before the bowels can be induced to perform their functions.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

is a safe remedy for the home. It is a stomach tonic which gives strength to the entire system and makes it possible for the bowels to act without further aid. It is so pleasant to take that children like it. It never causes pains or griping. All druggists sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at 50 cents and $1.00 a bottle.

Money back if not satisfied.

IMPROVEMENT OF CONSULAR SERVICE

SECRETARY ROOT ISSUES ORDER CREATING SPECIAL BOARD WHICH WILL ... ON JUNE 1.

WASHINGTON, May 26. Secretary Root today made public an order intended to mark a great advance in the consular service and to carry out the most important feature of the plans for reorganization which were not dealt with in the act recently passed by congress. This order created a board of five experienced consuls which will meet in Washington June 4.

The board is charged with the consideration of six topics, the first being regulations for the new inspection service. Congress provided for the appointment of five inspectors with a view to keeping the service at the highest point of efficiency.

The second topic is the relations between consulates and the embassies or legations. The board will undertake to say how far the diplomats shall go in inspecting consulates.

The third topic regards the rules which should govern promotion and appointment. Here the merit system is to have a test. Consuls are to be promoted in accordance with their ... and adaptability for ... work. The board is to consider whether it is good policy to retain a consul indefinitely at one post.

The fourth topic determines the scope and character of examination for new appointments. Secretary Root has already laid down certain general rules, ... that the applicant shall have a knowledge of more than one language and be otherwise fitted for his work, but he desires to supplement these rules.

The fifth topic deals with the tariff of fees for consular service. Considerable changes in the fees formerly arbitrarily fixed by law are now possible under the discretion conferred upon the president by the reorganization act and it will be possible, for example, to vary the charges for invoices according to their length and complexity.

The sixth and last topic is self-explanatory, being "amendments of existing regulations rendered necessary or expedient by the new statute."

The board is ordered to report to Wilbur J. Carr, chief of the consular bureau. Its detail is Frank H. Mason, consul general at Paris; Charles M. Dickinson, consul general at Constantinople; Robert S. Chilton, consul at Toronto; Edward H. Ozmun, consul at Stuttgart, and George H. Murphy, consular agent at St. Catherines.

EJECTED FROM THE... PEOPLE CAMP IN FIELDS

KITTANNING, Pa., May 26.—The deputy sheriffs have executed the 125 writs of ejectment against the miners at the plants of the Cowanshannock Coal and Gas company at Yatesboro, this county. Over 100 of the families have rented a large field near by and are camping here. They have made tents out of bed clothing and table cloths. An epidemic of sickness is feared, as no sanitary precautions are being taken. A large number of American miners have been sent in to take the places of the ones evicted, and it is expected that within the next ten days the mines will be running full.

CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

THE WORST DISEASE IN THE WORLD

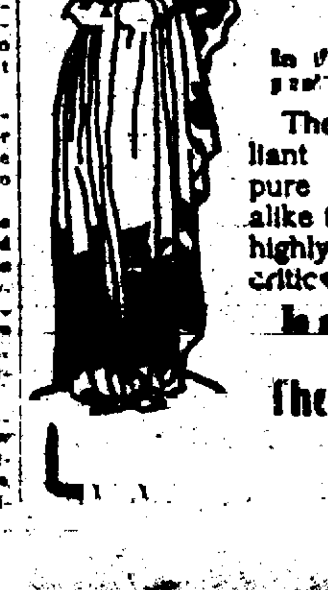

Contagious Blood Poison is the worst disease in the world; not only those who contract it suffer, but the awful taint is often transmitted to innocent offspring whose lives are blighted and bodies diseased because the virus of Contagious Blood Poison has been allowed to remain in the family blood. The first sign of this disease is usually a little pimple or blister, then a red rash breaks out, the mouth and throat ulcerate, the hair comes out, copper colored spots appear on the limbs, back and breast; and as the disease more thoroughly pollutes the blood, sores and ulcers form and if the trouble is not checked the finger nails drop off, and the soft bones of the nose and head are destroyed. S. S. S. goes down into the blood and forces out every particle of the poison and makes a complete and lasting cure. As soon as the system gets under the influence of the remedy the symptoms begin to pass away, and when the cure is complete the patient is left in a fine ... So thoroughly does S. S. S. ... that no signs of the disease are ever seen in after ... is born with a rich, pure blood supply. Book with complete instructions for home treatment ... will be given ...

In this respect it has given a ... favorable ... reputation among pianos of the world.

There is a sweetness of tone, a brilliant yet perfectly sympathetic quality, pure and well sustained which appeals alike to the professional ear and the less highly trained, but nevertheless intensely critical ones, of the home circle.

I. T. U. BOOSTERS ARE LIVE WIRES

UNIQUE SEMI-HUMOROUS CIRCULAR SENT OUT TO DELEGATES BY LOCAL CONVENTION COMMITTEE

It will not be the fault of the volume or novelty of the literature sent out by the local arrangements committee of Colorado Springs Typographical union No. 82 if the convention of the I. T. U. to be held here in August is not better attended than any of its predecessors.

"Boost" has been the watchword of the committee from its organization, and for several months it has been busily stirring up interest in all parts of the United States and Canada in the coming event.

Many thousands of circulars designed to create an interest in Colorado and a desire to visit the Pike's Peak region have been circulated broadcast and the entire membership of the I. T. U., approximating 60,000, has been covered in one way or another.

The latest circular sent out is a unique affair, designed principally to ascertain as near as possible who was coming and requesting information as to what accommodations were desired during the visitors' stay. The circular is illustrated with several half-tone pictures of attractive local scenery, and several important points are brought out through the medium of comic sketches made especially to fit the subjects. One thing in particular which the committee has tried to impress upon all intending visitors is the fact that despite the big crowds which are sure to be here during the season, they will not be held up, and that reasonable prices for accommodations would prevail. This point is brought out by a clever illustration portraying a desperado of the ... holding up an unsophisticated, unsuspecting ... The caption: "You ... be held up ... See Europe ... RICHARDS MAY QUIT COACHING TIGERS TEAM

STAR FOOTBALL MAN IS INCENSED OVER ATTITUDE AGAINST HIGH SCHOOL.

ROW AFTER CUTLER GAME CAUSES TROUBLE BETWEEN WISCONSIN MAN AND HIS FORMER PUPILS

As a result of a row which occurred at the close of the Cutler High school base ball game ... Washburn field yesterday afternoon, the Colorado college football team may lose the services of J. R. Richards, former University of Wisconsin star and one of the most successful coaches in the west. The trouble started, it is said, when several college men began to kid the High school players over their defeat at the hands of Cutler. Words were exchanged and finally a college man and a High school player became mixed up in a fist fight. This led to a general rough and tumble affair and several on each side were badly bruised up.

Ever since the High school team managed to hold the college men down to a low score some weeks ago it is said that the ill feeling which has existed between the two institutions for some time has been increased. At every possible turn the college men are said to have taken sides against the High school.

Prof. Richards said yesterday evening:

Richards' Statement

"This afternoon's row is the culmination of a long line of smaller rows which the college men have started with my boys. I wish to state plainly that the college has throughout taken sides against the High school. It made no difference who our opponents were. Such actions are not good taste, to say the least, on the part of representatives of an institution of higher education. If they continue I shall sever my connection with Colorado college as coach of its football team and devote my time to my own school, which I feel is deserving of it."

Richards played full back on the Wisconsin eleven for three years and was considered one of the most competent backfield men the university ever had. In his junior year he captained the team during the illness of the regular leader and was captain of the team in his senior and post-graduate years. Last season Richards turned out one of the fastest elevens Colorado college has ever had and was acknowledged by experts to be the leading coach of the state. He also gave Colorado Springs High school the championship football team of this part of the west. His loss would be keenly felt by all supporters of the Tigers and it is evident that everything will be done to induce him to reconsider his statement.

The College Side.

The following statement was issued last evening by Manager McClintock of the Colorado college baseball team:

"The statement that the college men are attempting to injure the High school or are always taking sides against them is absurd. It is natural that the college should favor the academy in any interscholastic contest, inasmuch as the academy men live right on the campus and are a part of our life. Any other course is impossible. The fracas after yesterday's game was unfortunate. The fact that it occurred in the college stand clear across the diamond from the High school quarters is proof that the college men were not hunting trouble. It is also significant that when the academy was defeated on the High school field there was no trouble whatever although there were as many, if not more, college men at that game.

"All that ... has been greatly exaggerated and resulted chiefly from misunderstanding on the part of the High school men that the college men were looking for a mix-up when as a matter of fact their efforts were directed, possibly in some instances unwisely, toward keeping peace."

URICSOL

A SOLVENT OF URIC ACID

Most people understand nowadays that Rheumatism is caused from URIC ACID being present in the blood which has not been passed off by the kidneys. This in turn poisons the whole system, formations begin in the various joints, followed by inflammation and intense Pain.

The usual treatment for Rheumatism prescribed by physicians is aimed to reduce the pain and give some temporary ease and comfort. URICSOL positively cures along perfectly legitimate lines. It dissolves the excess of URIC ACID, eliminates the Urea, enables the kidneys to perform their functions naturally and thoroughly, and soon puts the sufferer on the high road to health.

That is positive truth which is proved daily from all parts of the country by those who have enjoyed the benefit from it.

Sixty Eight Members of Congress Who Fought in the Civil War

If Blue and Gray Were to March in a Body to Arlington on Wednesday to Strew the Graves of Their Soldier Dead, Twenty-four Senators and Forty-four Representatives Would Be in Line—Among the Senators Would be Leaders of That Body, Spooner, Foraker, Scott, Burrows, Proctor, Nelson, Warren, "Yanks," and Daniel, Morgan, Pettus "Johnny Rebs"—In the House Contingent Would Be Hull, Hepburn, Lacey, Bingham, Keifer, Grosvenor, Federals, the Confederates Numbering Only Twelve—One More Than One-Half of Our Soldier-Congressmen Were Boy Soldiers—Eleven of Them Were Wounded, and All Told Seventeen Congressmen Bear Scars of Shot and Shell—Three Medal-of-Honor Men Are in Congress, Bingham, of Pennsylvania; Bradley, of New York, and Warren, of Wyoming, the Last Two Winning Medals While Boys—Every Warrior-Congressman Proved a Valiant Fighter, and Some Had Particularly Gallant Records, Alger, Keifer, Nelson, Pettus and Foraker Being Among Them. Deeds of Daring by Boys Who Threw Down Their School Books to Fight Either For or Against the Union; How Representative Graham, a Boy, Got Early Into the Fray.

By GUY T. VISKNISKKI.

IF, ON next Wednesday, the members of congress who fought either in blue or gray were to proceed in a body to Arlington there to strew with brave impartiality the graves of Union and Confederate dead, twenty-four senators and forty-four representatives would compose the little band. If the veterans of the Spanish-American war were included, the column would be augmented by one senator and eight representatives.

Over one-fourth of the senate's membership is made up of Civil war veterans—eleven Federals and thirteen Confederates. About one-ninth of the total membership of the house took part in the great struggle, those who fought for the Union numbering thirty-two and against it, twelve. All told, forty-three ex-Union soldiers and twenty-five ex-Confederate soldiers are now serving the whole country in its legislative body. The congresses immediately following the close of the Civil war were largely made up of former Union defenders.

Some of the most prominent men in both branches of the congress would be in the flower-laden procession, and, yes, there would be halting steps in that procession and an empty sleeve, as well as an empty trousers leg—that is, if artificial limbs were not worn.

Arbitrarily pairing the Union and Confederate senators, there would march cemeteryward, blue arm touching gray, Alger, of Michigan, and Morgan, of Alabama; Burrows, of Michigan, and Pettus, of Alabama; Bulkeley, of Connecticut, and Berry of Arkansas; Proctor, of Vermont, and Bacon, of Georgia; Spooner, of Wisconsin, and Daniel of Virginia; Nelson, of Minnesota, and Blackburn, of Kentucky; Scott, of West Virginia, and Martin, of Virginia; Warner of Missouri, and Money, of Mississippi; Depew, of New York, and McLaurin, of Mississippi; Warren, of Wyoming and Mallory, of Florida; with Foraker, of Ohio, as standardbearer, and Taliaferro, of Florida, McCreary, of Kentucky, and McEnery, of Louisiana, as color guard.

Distinguished Soldier-Representatives.

Among the representatives in line—Yank and Johnny Reb could not be paired, since the former outnumber the latter almost three to one. Iowa would have three nationally distinguished sons, Hull, Hepburn and Lacey, and Hedge, besides, Keifer and Grosvenor, together with the lesser known, but equally brave Scroggy, would represent Ohio. The leader of Pennsylvania's corporal guard of six—Bingham, Dale, Deemer, Mahon, Graham, Palmer—would be Bingham, "father of the House," and sometimes known as "Handsome Harry" in his home city of Philadelphia.

Illinois, which sent boys in blue by the tens of thousands to the front, would be in evidence in Knopf, and Indiana in Holliday. Kansas would have Calderhead; Massachusetts, Lovering; Michigan, a trio, Gardner, Bishop and Darragh; New York, five, Goulden, Bradley, Ketcham, Wadsworth and Alexander; Little Rhody, Capron; Vermont, Haskins; West Virginia, Dovener; Wisconsin, Minor and Jenkins; New Jersey, Howell and Wiley.

The armies of the gray would be represented by Gray, Richardson and Bankhead, of Alabama; Lester and Livingston, of Georgia; Meyer, of Louisiana; Talbot, of Maryland; Spight, of Mississippi; Field, of Texas; Jones, Slemp and Lamb, of the old Dominion.

If the Spanish-American War contingent were to fall in the rear there would march to decorate the graves of Lawton and others who saw service in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, Senator Dick, of Ohio, who was with the Eighth Ohio, in Cuba; Representative Wiley, of Alabama, who as lieutenant colonel of volunteer immunes, served in Cuba on Lawton's staff; Dickson, of Illinois; Ames, Gardner and Weeks, of Massachusetts, the first two seeing service in Cuba and Porto Rico; Denby, of Michigan, who was a gunner's mate, third class, on the Yosemite; Humphreys, of Mississippi, who served under Fitzhugh Lee, and whose father was a Confederate general, and Aiken, of South Carolina. If this little band marched, Ames and Humphreys, paired and swinging down Pennsylvania avenue side by side, would typify the spirit of the reunited country, one and indissoluble. It was Ames' father, Major General Adelbert, who forcibly ejected Humphreys' father, Brigadier General Benjamin G., from the executive mansion of Mississippi in '65, and succeeded him as military governor of the state. Ames is, also, the grandson of that Union general who, in the heat of war, was the most intensely hated of all Union commanders—Benjamin F. Butler.

The Boy Soldiers of Congress.

It has been said time and again by eminent authorities, that the Civil war was fought to its finish by boys. It is a striking fact that if the Union and Confederate veterans in congress were to set the country a fine example in Memorial Day chivalry by marching together to Arlington, the witnesses of the unique procession would behold a [illegible] band, over one-half of whom were boys when they enlisted to fight for or against their [illegible]. And some were still boys in years when they returned to civil life to prepare for schools, colleges and business.

Senator Berry had passed his [illegible] only a few months when he lost a leg at Corinth, in the bloody attack that Van Dorn made on [illegible]. He had then been second lieutenant of the Sixteenth Arkansas Volunteer Infantry more than a year.

Senator Mallory was sixteen and his colleague one year older when they joined Lee's army, Taliaferro leaving the school of William Dinwiddie at Greenwood, Va., to volunteer. McLaurin, of Mississippi was also sixteen when he went from his neighborhood school to the Confederate army as a private.

Foraker, of Ohio, likewise lacked five years of his majority when he enlisted as a private in the Eighty-ninth Ohio in July of '62. He was in the battles of Missionary Ridge, Lookout Mountain and Kenesaw Mountain. He marched with Sherman from Atlanta to the sea, and when he was returned to civil life he was only nineteen. The latter part of his service he was attached to the staff of General Henry W. Slocum. A daring and brilliant boy warrior was he.

fighting careers earlier than any of the other members of either branch of the present congress. When Alexander was mustered out he prepared for college, being at the proper age, eighteen. Jones was a military cadet added to the defense of Richmond. Taylor left a military academy in 1864 to join the First South Carolina cavalry, and was a courier from then on until the south laid down her arms.

Spight, Mississippi, had attained the rank of captain before he was twenty-one. He was the youngest officer of that rank in the famous "Walthall's brigade." He was severely wounded in the battle of Atlanta, and what remained of his regiment (the Thirty-fourth Mississippi) was surrendered by him in April of '65, when the rest of Joseph E. Johnston's army stacked its arms.

A Boy Who Raised a Company.

At nineteen, Dovener, of West Virginia, raised a company of loyal Virginians and served with it throughout the war. Knopf of Illinois, was sixteen when he enlisted and eighteen when he was mustered out at Savannah after marching from Atlanta to the sea years on the firing line with New Jersey volunteers. Bradley, of New York, was seventeen on the outbreak of hostilities. He was seriously wounded at Gettysburg, the Wilderness and before Petersburg. He rose from private to captain in the 124th New York. He was aide-de-camp to Major General Mott. He displayed great gallantry at Chancellorsville, for which he received the congressional medal of honor. When he was brevetted major, for meritorious service in the campaign terminating at Appomattox, he was only a few days beyond his majority.

Scroggy, of Ohio, was eighteen when in July of '61, he enlisted as a private in the Thirty-ninth Ohio. He was severely wounded while aiding in the assault on the Confederate works at Nickajack Creek, Ga., Independence day '64. He was then a corporal. All of Representative Scroggy's brothers, five in number, were in the Civil war. One was killed at Lookout Mountain, another wounded, and a third taken prisoner at Danville, Va.

How Graham Got in the Fray.

When the first call for volunteers came, Graham, of Pennsylvania, then a nineteen. He was wounded three times but despite all the lead that he stopped he managed to give the Confederacy four years of his young life.

Richardson, of Alabama, was put out of the fighting business by a Union bullet at Chickamauga, where he was wounded for the third time. He began fighting at sixteen.

Other boy warriors now representatives are Holliday, of Indiana, who went through the war with the Fifth Kansas; Hedge, of Iowa, who became a second lieutenant in the One Hundred and Sixteenth New York, and after the war was over graduated from Yale; Howell, of New Jersey, who enlisted at eighteen in the Twelfth New Jersey and served till the close of the struggle; Field, of Texas, who saw service under General N. B. Forrest; Jenkins of Wisconsin, who swaps campfire yarns with the other survivors of the Sixth Wisconsin, and Wadsworth, of New York, who entered the army in '64 at the age of eighteen. He left off preparing for Yale to do so, and he served till peace had come, on the staff of General G. K. Warren.

Of the boy warrior representatives, seven were Confederates eighteen gave that May 5, '61. He was among the Ohioans who responded to Lincoln's [illegible] for volunteers and he stayed in the fighting to the end. In '61 he saw service in western Virginia and Kentucky, the year following in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and West Virginia and from then on till the close of the conflict in Maryland and Virginia. In addition, he was in New York and Brooklyn in August and September of '63 to enforce the draft.

Eight days after enlisting he was commissioned a major of the Third Ohio and he was named a major-general in November of '64 "for gallant and meritorious services in the battles of Opequon, Fishers Hill and Cedar Creek, Virginia." The following month he was assigned to duty by Lincoln as a brigadier-general, and he obtained his second brevet for gallantry displayed in the pursuit and capture of General Lee's army. Seeing service, as he did, over the greater part of the seat of war, General Keifer was in numerous engagements and the wonder is that he was wounded so few times, especially when his daring under fire is taken into consideration. He served four years and two months; few men on either side brevet brigadier general, for gallant and meritorious services to rank from the battle of Trevillion Station, June 11, '64, and major general by brevet, just a year later to a day, for gallant and meritorious services during the war.

It was at Trevillion Station that Alger, who was then with Sheridan in the Shenandoah, charged the enemy with but three hundred of his regiment, the Fifth Michigan cavalry, and took eight hundred prisoners. Earlier in the war, at Boonville, Miss., Alger, while captain, with ninety picked men, charged three thousand Johnny Rebs in the rear and put them to rout. This charge the general has characterized as "the best thing I ever did in the service." At any rate, it made him a major.

Colonel Alger's was the first Federal regiment to appear at Gettysburg, and so gallantly did he pursue the retreating Lee after the battle that he was especially mentioned by Custer for bravery.

General Alger entered the service a private. A month later he was a captain. He was twice wounded. The first time he was wounded he was also taken prisoner, but he made his escape the same day. For excitement and adventure, Senator Alger's war record even exceeds in importance by that of any soldier now sitting in either branch of congress.

Morgan's Love for His Regiment.

The venerable Morgan, who has a lot of fight left in him yet (note the Panama Canal discussions), began his army career as a private, after voting as a delegate in state convention for the secession of Alabama. A year later he had been promoted to a colonelcy, after which he raised the Fifty-first Alabama. The next year he was appointed a brigadier general. But when the colonel of his old regiment was killed in battle, Morgan gave up his star to lead his regiment. Later in the same year he was reappointed brigadier general, and in order to keep him from resigning again for his regiment's sake, he was assigned to an Alabama brigade, which included his regiment.

Mr. Morgan's colleague, Pettus, not only saw service in the civil war; he also fought as strenuously for his co[illegible] in the Mexican war, as he [illegible] against it in the great internecine struggle. Pettus could not very w[illegible] help being a soldier; his mother was daughter of a revolutionary soldi[illegible] Captain Anthony Winston. [illegible] Pettus was a lieutenant in the M[illegible] difficulty; in the civil war he rose to be a brigadier general, commanding a brigade in General Stevenson's division of the Army of the Tennessee. He was through the siege of Vicksburg, and soon after he was exchanged he was promoted to a colonelcy. He and Nelson can compare notes on living on mule flesh and other siege food. The venerable senator was also in the battles of Port Gibson, Baker's Creek and numerous others. He served to the end of the war, and he began his efforts in behalf of the Confederacy by helping to raise the Twentieth Alabama.

Grosvenor a Gallant Fighter.

Senator Burrows raised a company of the Seventeenth Michigan, was captain till '63 and fought at South Mountain, Antietam, Vicksburg, Fredericksburg, Jacksonville and Knoxville, all important battles. Warner, of Missouri, rose to be major of the Forty-Fourth Wisconsin. Bacon, of Georgia, as adjutant, saw service with the Ninth Georgia, in Virginia, during the first two years of the war, and later was commissioned captain and assigned to general staff duty in the Provisional army of the Confederate states.

Blackburn, of Kentucky, threw down his law briefs in Chicago when civil war was certain, and was soon wearing a Confederate uniform. Proctor, of Vermont, was lieutenant and quartermaster of the Third Vermont on the staff of General "Baldy" Smith, and major and colonel of the Fifth and the Fifteenth Vermont regiments respectively and successively. He was in command of the Fifteenth at Gettysburg. He served from '61 to '65.

Hepburn was captain, major and lieutenant-colonel of the Second Iowa cavalry. A [illegible] part of the time he was on the staffs of Rosecrans, Sheridan and other generals. Grosvenor, [illegible] in service of the gallant trio of Ohioans in the house, as major, lieutenant-colonel, colonel and brevet brigadier-general, led fellow Ohioans on to battle from July of '61 to November of '65. At the battle of Nashville, December of '64, he commanded a brigade. Like Pettus, Grosvenor comes of fighting stock. His father, Peter, was a major in the war of 1812, and his grandfather, Thomas, a colonel in the Revolution. They served their country in Connecticut regiments—Peter in the Tenth, Thomas in the Second.

The Valorous Sixty-Eighth.

The boyish years of thirty-six [illegible] the medals of honor [illegible] by three; the various brevets [illegible] ferred on nine Union [illegible] Capron, Bingham, Bradley, [illegible] Grosvenor, Keifer, Ketcham, [illegible] Spooner, the wounds [illegible] enteen, the numerous [illegible] enlisted man to officer, [illegible] the brigadier generals and the [illegible] dier generals and major [illegible] brevet all these attest [illegible]

FOUR NATIONAL LAW MAKERS WHO WERE BOY SOLDIERS.

SENATOR SPOONER AND REPRESENTATIVE JENKINS, OF WISCONSIN.

SENATORS BACON, OF GEORGIA, AND DANIEL, OF VIRGINIA.

Senator Daniel of Virginia, had been twice wounded before he was twenty-one; the first time at the first Bull Run, before he was nineteen, and later near Boonsboro, Md., when he was first lieutenant and adjutant of his regiment, the Eleventh Virginia infantry. His fighting career was brought to a close when a third bullet found him at the Battle of the Wilderness. He enlisted as a private. Mr. Daniel's colleague, Mr. Martin, was still under seventeen when, a cadet at the Virginia Military Institute, he first served with that institute's battalion in the defense of Richmond.

Knute Nelson, of Minnesota, was only twenty when a Confederate bullet pierced his thigh and he fell disabled and helpless under the breastworks of Port Hudson, June 14, 1863. There he lay till a Confederate picket discovered him and took him a prisoner. Corporal Nelson remained in the Confederate hospital until the place fell, on July 8. With the possible exception of Pettus, he is the only man in the senate that ever had to live on mule meat. During the last ten days of the siege this and miserable corn bread and sassafras tea comprised the food which he and the others in the besieged place had to eat.

A Medal of Honor Boy.

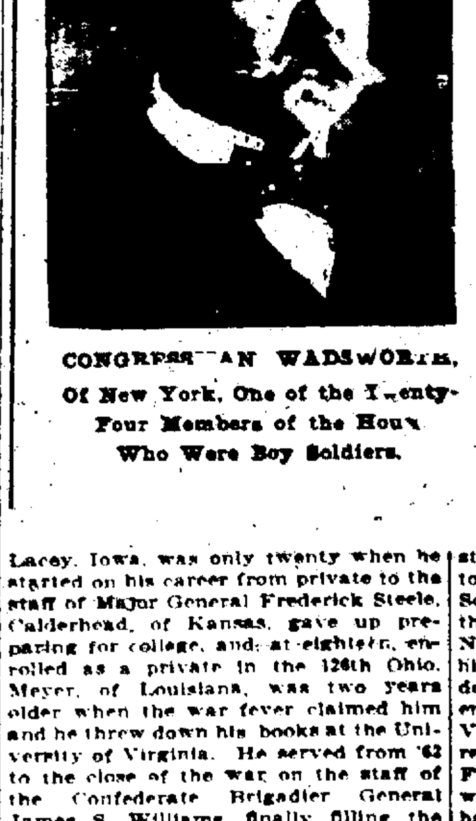

Senator Warren, of Wyoming, lacked six days of being nineteen when in the siege of Port Hudson, he performed the deed of gallantry that won for him a congressional medal of honor. He went to the defense of the Union as a private in the Forty-ninth Massachusetts, and he was mustered out a non-commissioned officer of that regiment.

It is interesting to note the coincidences in the careers of Senators Warren and Nelson. Each showed his fighting blood at Port Hudson. Each served as a private and then as a "non-com." Each is in the same senatorial class and rank, and each has been governor of his state, to which he removed from another.

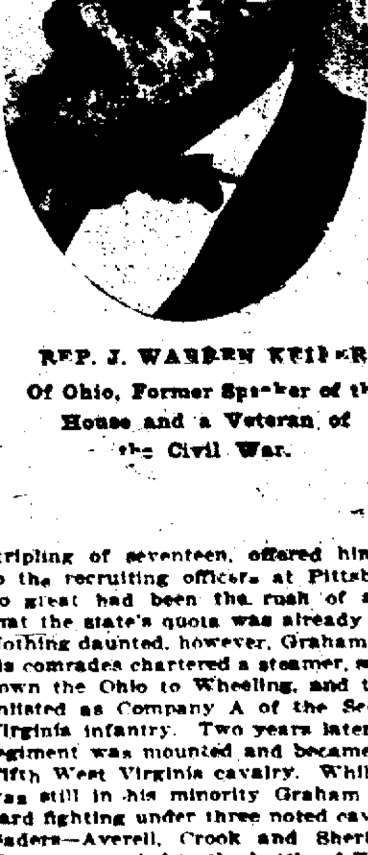

Senator Scott, of West Virginia, was twenty when he gave his services to the Union, and Spooner, of Wisconsin, was also under his majority when, like many another soldier-congressman, he enlisted a private, to come out an officer—a captain, and major by brevet.

All told, eleven of the twenty-four war senators were boy soldiers.

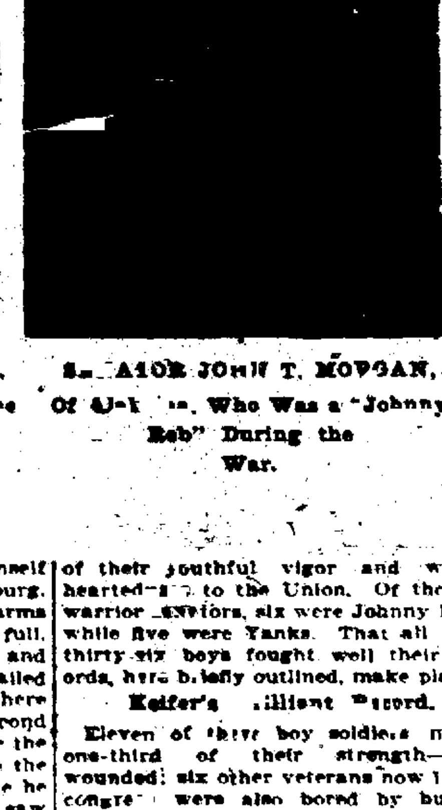

Of the twenty-five representatives who were boy soldiers three—Taylor, of Alabama, Jones, of Virginia, and Alexander, of New York, were only fifteen [illegible]. They [illegible]

CONGRESSMAN WADSWORTH, Of New York, One of the Twenty-Four Members of the House Who Were Boy Soldiers.

REP. J. WARREN KEIFER, Of Ohio, Former Speaker of the House and a Veteran of the Civil War.

SENATOR JOHN T. MORGAN, Of Alabama, Who Was a "Johnny Reb" During the War.

Lacey, Iowa, was only twenty when he started on his career from private to the staff of Major General Frederick Steele. Calderhead, of Kansas, gave up preparing for college, and at eighteen, enrolled as a private in the 126th Ohio. Meyer, of Louisiana, was two years older when the war fever claimed him and he threw down his books at the University of Virginia. He served from '62 to the close of the war on the staff of the Confederate Brigadier General James S. Williams, finally filling the post of assistant adjutant general.

Gardner, of Michigan, was in his twentieth year when he was severely wounded at Resaca, Ga. He fought for his country over four years, being mustered out in December, '65. Bishop, a colleague, was just past nineteen when a wound that he received at Lees Mills, Va., while fighting as a private in the Fifty-third New York, made the amputation of his right arm a necessity.

Wiley, of New Jersey, was nineteen when he graduated from college and went to the defense of the Union, serving into '64. Gardner, of the same state, was a veteran at twenty, after three stripling of seventeen, offered himself to the recruiting officers at Pittsburg. So great had been the rush of arms that the state's quota was already full. Nothing daunted, however, Graham and his comrades chartered a steamer, sailed down the Ohio to Wheeling, and there enlisted as Company A of the Second Virginia infantry. Two years later the regiment was mounted and became the Fifth West Virginia cavalry. While he was still in his minority Graham saw hard fighting under three noted cavalry leaders—Averell, Crook and Sheridan. He was wounded in the battle of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., but served till the end of the war and witnessed the surrender of Lee.

Capron, of Rhode Island, of the famous army family of that name, was twenty when he enlisted in the Second Rhode Island. A few months later he was detached and placed in the signal corps, serving with it until the end of the war, coming out a first lieutenant, U. S. A., and captain and major by brevet.

of their youthful vigor and wholeheartedness to the Union. Of the boy warrior senators, six were Johnny Rebs, while five were Yanks. That all these thirty-six boys fought well their records, here briefly outlined, make plain.

Keifer's Brilliant Record.

Eleven of these boy soldiers nearly one-third of their strength—were wounded; six other veterans now in the congress were also bored by bullets, five by Confederate missiles. These six are all representatives.

Hull, of Iowa, was dropped by a Johnny Reb's bullet while charging with his regiment on the intrenchments at Black River, May 17 '63. [illegible] of this wound he was compelled to resign in October of the same year. He was then a captain in the Twenty-third Iowa, having been promoted from first lieutenant. Hull entered the army in '62 after graduating, at the age of twenty-one, from the Cincinnati Law school.

Keifer, of Ohio, whose military record is exceptionally brilliant, was wounded four times, severely at the Wild[illegible], and three slightly before were longer in volunteer uniform. If General Keifer were to write his wartime experiences, the book, as a thriller, would make the much-vaunted Third avenue melodrama seem tame by comparison.

Bingham, Medal of Honor Soldier.

"Handsome Harry" Bingham, of Philadelphia, "the father of the House," can tell you, when in the mood, how it felt to be wounded, first at Gettysburg, later at Spottsylvania, and still later at Farmville, Va., in the closing of the war. He can also display a medal of honor, awarded him for special gallantry on the field of battle; and he was breveted four times for distinguished gallantry—as major, lieutenant colonel, colonel and brigadier general.

If Mahon, of Pennsylvania, had not been so intensely patriotic and re-enlisted as a veteran in January, '64, in the Twenty-first Pennsylvania cavalry, he would not have stopped a Confederate bullet at Boydton Plank, Va., eleven months later. Mahon took part in most of the engagements in which the Fifth corps, army of the Potomac, participated, he having first enlisted in '62 as a private in the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Pennsylvania. Thus, one-half of Pennsylvania's soldier-representatives were wounded—Graham and Bingham being the others. Three of Michigan's five stopped the flight of lead.

Lamb, of Virginia, went through the war with the Third Virginia cavalry. He commanded his company three years, and incidentally he was "wounded several times," to quote his own words.

What tales of battlefield daring of hospital experiences and suffering—the seventeen congressmen whose bodies were scarred by shot and shell could swap with one another around the campfire that would doubtless be held in the evening following [illegible] march to Arlington to take [illegible] Wednesday afternoon.

Alger in Sixty-six Battles and Skirmishes.

And as Comrades Morgan and Alger, one of the seventeen, together strewed Union and Confederate graves, what vivid reminiscences of battles could they exchange.

Alger was in sixty-six battles and skirmishes from the time he entered the Union army in the Second Michigan cavalry, in September '61, till he was mustered out in the summer of '65. He was captain, major, lieutenant [illegible]

SUNDAY, MAY [illegible], 1906.

SOME THINGS WORTH WHILE.

WHILE THE MINDS of our people are occupied with various schemes for enhancing the attractiveness of the city it would be well if they would occasionally turn their attention from the matter of material betterments and consider seriously the question whether in the long run equal advantages will not accrue to Colorado Springs through the liberal encouragement on the part of her citizens of those things which make for refinement of mind and manners or to make use of a much abused word—for culture.

We have recently seen the town aroused to an unwonted degree of enthusiasm in behalf of a cause quite distinct from any directly material advantage. The Young Men's Christian Association appealed with the force of a righteous object to the people of Colorado Springs and the people justified their good name as citizens by responding liberally and unhesitatingly to that appeal. The result is that we have today in our midst an institution which stands for civic righteousness, for social purity and for all that ennobles life, freed from a burdensome debt contracted through the necessity of its being and given the opportunity of enlarging the bounds of its beneficent work. For once at least the people have put themselves on record as valuing above mere money the forces for which the Y. M. C. A. stands, since they paid it so very liberally that these forces might be invigorated and extended. We may venture the opinion that the time [illegible] the citizens of Colorado Springs gave to the Y. M. C. A. in a fortnight the sum of $[illegible],000 will add to the attracting power of the city through the country that the expenditure of an equal amount for purely material advantages could do.

This affording of the right to a great and ennobling institution has been a big step toward true culture. But there are others. Why should not Colorado Springs be widely known as a city where literature, music and the arts are the familiar and honored guests of the people; where the stage always attracts the best that the land produces and where all that makes life worth living is a revealed source? That such is not the case is easily evident. A few disinterested people with most laudable persistence endeavor year by year to bring a series of concerts by the great [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] find themselves [illegible] at last [illegible] the opportunity of seeing a play [illegible] worthy of presentation is to put it off [illegible] so with other forms of [illegible]. It is only too apparent that the people of this town do not consider these things as worthy of support [illegible] worth even a very small amount of money.

That a certain degree of appreciation of good music is to be found among us is evident from the fact that a free concert in one of the churches, for example, is always well attended. But the moment it becomes a question of either paying out a dollar more or less for the privilege of hearing a great artist or of going without the privilege most of our citizens prefer the latter course.

The [illegible] Colorado Springs [illegible] lack of money and we are fortunate in having a small minority of people who really appreciate the higher things of life and are determined to have them here if possible. But our contention is that the vast majority of the people care little or nothing for these things [illegible] are willing to receive them only if they cost nothing in hard cash.

This contention may be unjust and the argument fallacious. If so no one will rejoice more heartily than ourselves to find them disproved. The sooner and the more convincingly we are shown to be in the wrong in this matter the more cause will there be for rejoicing.

PRESBYTERIAN UNION.

A NEW CHAPTER in church history was written the past week which is of interest not only to the denominations concerned but to all friends of Christianity. It must have been a thrilling moment in the meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly at Des Moines when delegates of the Cumberland Presbyterian General Assembly meeting in Decatur Illinois arrived and were received as brethren of an identical faith and of one denomination of Christians. The press reports state that the incident was marked by tears, laughter, hallelujahs and tremendous applause. It is no more intrusive fancy to suggest that there may also have been applause in a higher court. Day before yesterday the Presbyterian and Cumberland Presbyterian Churches were two distinct bodies, today they are one. Negotiations covering several years are thus brought to a happy conclusion and one more of the breaches of Christendom is closed.

To the one million one hundred and fifty thousand communicants of the Presbyterian Church are now added the one hundred and eighty thousand communicants of the Cumberland Church, [illegible] ing the new Presbyterian Church of a million and a third members.

The Cumberland Presbyterian Church originated about a hundred years ago in Kentucky as an off shoot of the Presbyterian Church. It took its name [illegible] the Cumberland Presbytery in which [illegible] [illegible] arose and represented some divergence of doctrine and practice. In the century of separation [illegible] grown into a strong aggressive body while [illegible] church in the same time has increased six times more rapidly than the increase of the population of the country. The Cumberland church has never ceased to be Presbyterian in feeling and in government. It was the revision of the Westminster Confession of Faith by the Presbyterian General Assembly a few years ago that opened the way for reunion. The leaders of the two churches declared that they were now one in belief and that no reason remained for separate existence. Despite some opposition and reluctance, this sentiment has prevailed and mother and daughter are now reunited after a century of separation in the same ecclesiastical fold.

It is a consummation that was devoutly to be wished for and the action of these kindred branches of Presbyterianism in healing their differences and coming together under the same name for a common interest and work will be hailed everywhere as a new evidence of the coherence of Christianity. Surely it was not the purpose of Him who founded this world-wide faith that it should be marked by schism and disruption. Conceding that the denominations have had a providential office in the growth of Christianity it is still true that the tendency of this universal faith should inherently be towards union rather than disunion. If nothing more it is an economic thing to unite. Comity of the denominations would prevent waste and duplication. Moreover the union of the branches of Christianity removes a standing reproach to Protestantism. As long as the Christian religion especially as represented by the Protestant churches fails to present a united front to the world it will be difficult for some men to accept the divine origin of the faith. It is reasonable to suppose that the spirit of Christ is one.

It must be very gratifying to all who hope for the spiritual and moral uplift of the race that the followers of the Nazarene are looking more and more in the direction of fellowship and co-operation. Differences are sinking out of sight. Common likenesses are emerging. The age of denominational controversy is past. The denomination nowadays that magnifies differences is out of tune with the age and with its fuller understanding of the spirit of Jesus. Federation and union are the watchwords of the hour. From the height of Calvary Jesus seems to be summoning his disciples to a common faith and a common task. Already some of the Canadian churches have obeyed the call and in the United States the feeling grows apace. The next step should be the healing of the divisions created in certain of the denominations by the stress of civil war. There is no excuse whatever for the separate existence of denominations that belong to the same origin and family. There should be at least one American Presbyterian Church, one American Methodist Church and so on. If North and South are united politically why not also in religion? But this spirit of union being once under way no one can predict how far it may reach. The federation of the denominations which stops short of organic union yet hopes to accomplish some of the results of union contains the promise of good things. Some who are children today may live to see the time when denominations will fall back into one United Church of Jesus Christ. It will be a good day for the world when this begins to be. This present union of the Presbyterians will aid the dawning.

HENRIK IBSEN.

WHEN on last Wednesday Henrik Ibsen died the useful career of one of the very great men of his age came to a close. For nearly forty years of his life he had struggled with poverty, never once forgetting his chosen mission. When in 1866 his "Brand" appeared and with it the fame and recognition that had so long been withheld, the new honors served only to stimulate this warrior on the field of intellect to new and higher endeavor. Neither adversity nor success could for a moment turn him from his life's purpose. He was one of the great reformers, a physician to humanity.

We may briefly distinguish three main phases in his career as author. The first phase of strong national and romantic coloring endeavors to realize eternal ideals in the little nation that at that time was the world to the poet. He here seeks to admonish, spur, inspire, impatient with the wretched spiritual and intellectual weakness of his countrymen; he wants to awaken into life and activity the power that he knows is but slumbering in his Scandinavians. His idealism during this epoch is retrospective. He does not aim to create things new, to lay foundations for what has not yet been; he rather wants to conjure up the past, to resurrect to new glory what has been. Consequently the historical sense predominates in this epoch. It is significant that in "The Pretenders," the last work of this period, Hakon, the national hero, strives to create a new era.

This marked change is still more emphasized during the second phase of the poet's career. In "An Enemy of the People" the thought is expressed that all things created are worthy of being destroyed. Here is then the great significance of the idea of evolution asserting its right. This second phase gives a long succession of dramas of battle against present conditions. The poet seems to believe that he only need destroy the present in order to see a better future at once assert itself. But the individualist Ibsen had undervalued not the difficulties of his warfare but its duration. He came to recognize that he had to do with tendencies of human development that can advance only step by step with demands whose fulfillment exceeds the time allotted to a single man, with problems of generations, not with wishes and aspirations of individuals. And so during the third phase of his career the old yet valiant fighter sees the dreams of his youth and manhood dissolve in misty distance. When he realizes this gloomy forebodings and painful resignation possess him, even pessimism assails him. But his resignation does not lead to idle despair, he still struggles for the cause of humanity. In "Little Eyolf" he expresses his resignation but also his hope. The welfare of the individual must make room for the development of future generations, the interests of the man yield to the demand of the interest of the race.

The battle which Ibsen began is still going on. He was the great skeptic among the modern poets, he destroyed that others might build newer and better things. In the great fight for the uplifting of humanity he developed a beautiful slogan: "Out of servitude through liberty into voluntary service." In keeping with this Ibsen labored all his long life.

Perseverance always wins. No matter what obstacles may intervene, success always crowns the efforts of the fellows who keeps on trying. A Pittsburg man has succeeded in committing suicide on the 26th attempt.

THE THRIVING WEST

From the New York Evening Mail

There was a time when the east had to carry the west. Everything out there was done on borrowed money, money borrowed from the east. Now the west pretty nearly carries the east. It feeds us and buys our goods.

It is in the west that the foundation values are produced. Eastern agriculture, for instance, is a subsidiary, mere sideline agriculture. The piece de resistance on every table comes from the west. The west supplies not only the meat and the bread but generally the potatoes. The celery, the Brussels sprouts and the strawberries may come from the east but the substantials are from the prairies.

The other day Judge W. H. Moore, returning from an inspection trip over the Rock Island and Frisco railroad systems, said:

"A thing that struck me in the southwest is that the farming is scientific. The people find out just what the soil will produce before they plant it. The government and the railroads have done a splendid work for that country in placing the farming on this basis. Out in western Kansas and western Nebraska they are raising on what were the semi-arid lands, two crops of alfalfa and are making fairly successful efforts in wheat culture. Only a few years ago land in that region sold at $1.50 an acre. The same lands now sell from $30 to $40 an acre. That speaks for itself.

"It is in the west that scientific farming producing an increased yield by thorough cultivation is now getting in its work. By means of it grazing land is going into agriculture all over the semi-arid west. Year by year Texas, where all public land is state land, not United States land, annually [illegible] to the highest bidder hundreds of thousands of acres upon which grazing leases have run. In the central and western parts of Kansas and Nebraska, which were once held to be good only for stock-raising purposes, are now producing millions of bushels of wheat. Alfalfa, with two to five crops a year, has doubled the producing power of much land. Exhausted farms are being converted by scientific tillage into highly productive territory.

"All this points toward a vista of intelligent prosperity which is far beyond anything that the country has yet realized. The time will yet come when this wave of agricultural improvement will roll back over eastern hills and meadows, but just now it is the boundless west which enjoys the Midas touch."

WHY NOT ENFORCE LAW

From the Pueblo Chieftain

The crime of issuing scrip is still permitted by the authorities in this city. The Smelting company and Herman & Sellers are issuing it right along, so are the Colorado Supply company and the steel works. The people cannot understand why these violations of the law continue to defy the officials. When the scrip is put out of business Pueblo business men will appreciate the difference.

ACCEPTABLE ADMINISTRATION.

From the Akron Pioneer Press

Governor Jesse F. McDonald is keeping up his record as the busiest governor Colorado has ever had. No official question affecting the interests of the state or of any individual herein is too small or unimportant for him to either attend to or have others attend. He is running the office of governor strictly on the same principles as he would run his own private business and he makes no fuss or noise about it, all of which is very acceptable to the people of the state.

LAWS NEED REVISING.

From the Loveland Reporter

There is much need of the laws of our state being revised soon. As the law now stands a boy under sixteen years of age cannot be shut up in prison and in case of misdemeanor must be taken before the county judge and the case either dismissed or the boy sentenced to a reform school. Last week two Loveland boys were arrested for stealing the [illegible] shal having considerable trouble in making the arrest. He could not take the culprits before the justice as that is against the law. After consulting the district attorney and finding that Judge Ben [illegible] not in Fort Collins he turned the culprits loose, finding that there was practically no law to reach them directly for stealing. Now it would look as though the parents or guardian would be responsible for the action of these boys as the parent has a right to collect the wages of his child until he is eighteen years of age and if such right is given the parent or guardian it is certain that the same right should be used by the officers of the law in making parents responsible for the action of the child. Hence the arrest of the parents for allowing the children to engage in such work would place a barrier in the way of the child being turned loose on the streets to do or come and go as he pleases. The marshal should try the arresting of the parents as the ones who are responsible for the misdemeanor of the child.

NO ARRESTS IN NEVADA

From the Cripple Creek Times

There will be no arrests in Goldfield or anywhere in Nevada for the beating up of Walter Shilling, F. C. Brown and other investors and visitors who have been run out of the western gold fields by members of the Western Federation of Miners. Any attempt to enforce the law in Nevada will be laughed at as it was for so many years in Cripple Creek.

Men were beaten up here, run out of the district and others were murdered. But there were no arrests for these offenses. Nobody was ever arrested for the murder of Martin Gleason, though the name of the man who committed the dastardly deed was known to half the male population of Altman.

No arrests were ever made of men known to have whipped and run out of the district an engineer at Gillett. Nobody was arrested for abusing and driving down the valley twelve men from the Florence and Cripple Creek depot in this city, although the affair was told of and laughed at on Bennett avenue the same night. Hundreds of men were slugged and run out of the Cripple Creek district during the time it was controlled by the Western Federation of Miners and not a single arrest was ever attempted by officials elected to place through favors of that organization.

And they are running Nevada with even a higher hand than they did this district. They observe no law and respect no rights of property. They murdered and stole in Cripple Creek and they are following the same course of lawlessness in Nevada. Under the guise of a laboring man's union the Federation is conducting an armed conspiracy for the protection of thugs and criminals and the defying of every law of the land. It is not a union in anything except crime and offers protection to no man who lives in obedience to the laws. It demands no qualifications of a prospective member except that he hate his neighbor and the only obligation required is that he injure another.

Near to Nature

SOCIETY NEWS.

From the Van Buren (Mo.) Current Local

There is some talk of Grandpap Williams and Old Lady Pettijohn getting married. Mr. Williams hangs to her like a bat to a piece of bark. He is about eighty-three years old and she is about fifty.

CLUB LIFE IN POND CREEK.

From the Pond Creek (Okla.) Vidette

Pond Creek has more clubs, lodges and various other organizations than any other city of its size in the territory. There is nothing surprising about that, but the names that are attached to the clubs are enough to stagger most any one. The Nescatunga club is an old timer and named in honor of the Salt Fork River running east of town. Nescatunga means salt taste in the language of the Cherokee Indian who called the Salt Fork River Nescatunga. The Ouija Club is another one. The lord only knows what the meaning of that is and he won't tell. The Hinkle Club is the latest. Hinkle is the German word for hen, therefore it can easily be surmised that the Hinkle party would be a hen party.

SUNDAY READING

BY REV. [illegible], D. D.

JOHN THE BAPTIST had been beheaded. The twelve apostles returned from their first missionary tour. Jesus with his disciples is teaching near the sea of Galilee. Great multitudes assembled near the sea to see and hear Jesus. He gave them a great out of door sermon and follows it up by giving them a great out of door meal. This is the only miracle of Christ which is recorded by all of the very big days in Christ's life and takes its place in the front rank with his baptism day, temptation day, the Transfiguration day, Gethsemane day and Calvary day.

Rest by the Way

Rest is intended to exercise a wholesome influence upon character. When Jesus bade his disciples come apart into a desert place and rest awhile it was to plan for larger work and to comfort them regarding the death of the Baptist. The country was selected as the best place for rest, as there they would be away from the restless multitude. Rest is a necessity for man, but it must not be forgotten that it bears a just relation to earnest work. Hard conscientious workers alone are good resters. Just as too much work will wear out the body so our souls will become faint and weak without rest. All true rest must be earned by hard work. Rest is the right of every worker. Rest always prepares us for future work. A principle which God has laid down should never be forgotten, both in our working and in our resting hours; that is, whether we eat or drink, or whatever we do, do all to the glory of God. It is our privilege today to go aside with Christ as did the disciples. We need periods of retirement that we may take account of our spiritual stock and consider where we are, what we are and what we are doing. Retirement is essential to the growth of true piety. Moody says: "Character is what you are in the dark." As pilgrims we should turn aside frequently from the beaten track to taste of the sparkling waters of the fountain of life and cool ourselves in the shade of the Rock Christ Jesus.

The Compassionate Savior

The word compassion is a very strong one, and while it signifies a spirit of sympathy or benevolence it also embodies a sensation of pain or fellow feeling which is as strong as the compassion. He saw the people scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd and he felt for them as a shepherd for his straying sheep. Sinners deeply moved Jesus with compassion. He came as the Savior of sinners. He pitied them. A suffering, sorrowing, sinful ones are peculiarly the objects of the Savior's compassion. Always forgetting himself he turned to the needy ones about him. Those who came to him he will in no wise cast out. He never wearies of having some one to him. Compassion is deeper than sympathy. Compassion is love multiplied by sorrow and raised to a higher power. Compassion has in it an element of vicariousness which brings us into intimate fellowship with the sufferer. This readiness to relieve the sufferings of those in distress Christ showed us to be one of the most beautiful features of the Divine character.

Doing Much With Little

If we but give our five barley loaves and two small fishes to Jesus Christ as did this lad he can multiply them and make out of them more than enough to feed a multitude. A cup of cold water is a very little thing, but given in the name of Christ it shall be rewarded. Go to Jesus your five loaves and he will give you twelve baskets back. None in that vast assembly went away dissatisfied. Jesus brought devotion into every act of life. He considered nothing little or insignificant. God is in trifles. He blessed the five loaves and two fishes, teaching us thereby that religion is not an act but a habit, not an impulse but a principle. God has grace enough for all. You cannot check the fountain of supply. Do not fear the desert places of life as long as you take Jesus Christ with you. The multitude in the desert with Jesus were as safe as if in the midst of abundance. Christ gives to us spiritual food which is greater and better than any material elements. He gives us this spiritual food through his servants and it multiplies in their hands.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Rev. John Williams, "The Apostle of Polynesia," was one of the greatest missionaries of the Christian church. He was born at Tottenham June 29, 1796, and was murdered at Erromanga, New Hebrides, November 20, 1839. By trade an ironmonger, he was led at the age of 20 to give himself to missionary labor and was sent by the London Missionary society to the Society Islands November, 1816. He settled in the island of Raiatea. In 1823 he discovered the island of Rarotonga. On both islands he did most useful and permanent work, not only for their religious, but also for their secular interests. He reduced the language of the islands to writing and with friends translated the New Testament into it. He visited England in 1834-38 and on his return made a tour of the group of Society Islands in the course of which he was killed by the natives. It was during his four years stay at home that he had the New Testament, which he had translated into Rarotongan, printed. He helped the natives to draw up a code of laws for civil administration upon the basis of a new religion. While at Rarotonga he with the help of natives built a ship within about four months with tools which he had made. In this ship he made voyages among other groups of islands including Samoa.

The God of Missions

The Lord reigns over Africa as well as America. The isles of the sea and the uttermost parts of the earth are his habitation. While clouds and darkness are round about Him, while much mystery may envelop the movements of God concerning heathen lands and peoples, nevertheless we may be assured of this, that righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne. His reign is one of righteousness and equity is continually upheld. Lightnings, earthquakes and volcanoes are symbols of his majesty and power. These works of God only confuse the unbelieving and superstitious and ignorant while they cause the Christian to see the mighty power and majesty of God.

Scripture plainly declares that our Lord is king and is reigning now. We believe that our Lord has come and is reigning now and are looking forward to his coming again in the clouds of Heaven. To the question, "Why is evil so prevalent?" we answer, "That it was not the Divine intention to suppress evil in a moment, but that He must reign till He hath put all enemies under his feet." Humanity is far better today than it was in the days of our Lord. There is much evil on every side, but it is not as black as in the dark ages. Gradually our reigning Lord is putting all spiritual foes under his feet. Mission lands are turning to the light of the world. Heathen nations are exchanging their lewd practices and superstitious rights for the truth of God. Our reigning Lord will finally bring all lands under his dominion and all people to his cross.

RANDOM REFLECTIONS.

"I am O. K. Tell mother."

This was a message received in the city of Philadelphia recently by a mother, [illegible] and in the hospital, from her son in San Francisco. It shows the value of knowing how to transmit news in the midst of disaster. "Give us, O give us," says Carlyle, "the man who sings at his work." With a respectful change may we substitute "the man who can be happy in the midst of disaster." What we are looking for every day is the man who can be happy in the midst of reverses and disappointments. We find many, but there should be many more. The O. K. man is the man that moves the world. The O. K. man is the converse of the muck rake man. One goes with his head up, the other with his head down. The one sings with Riley—

Whatever the weather may be, says he—
Whatever the weather may be,
It's the songs we sing and the smiles we wear
That's a-makin' the sunshine everywhere.

The Muck Rake man must lament with Byron:

Through life's dull round so dim and dirty
I have dragged to three and thirty,
What have these years been to me?
Nothing excepting thirty three.

Too many of us take life too seriously because we take ourselves too seriously. The Christian is the only one who knows how to take life. And indeed only the true Christian who can say with Paul, "All things work together for good," knows the joy of living in this world. Life means little or nothing to the fatalist. The gospel of chance is a gospel of pessimism. The gospel of chance never casts the bright rays of hope in the pathway of its votaries. The mind that is cheerful in its present condition will be averse to the future. The Christian mind and heart alone can meet the bitter experiences of life with a smile.

TO SAN FRANCISCO FRIENDS.

Above the welter of the waves
Heard through the darkness o'er the main
Comes to our island shore the moan
As a mighty man in pain.
Ay, listen! for its aching still
While British hearts responsive thrill.

For Death has broken down the guard
That held, one hoped, the Golden Gate
And Fire has come to Earthquake's aid
To wreak the fell intent of Fate
And where the sun set flaming red
A ruined City mourns her dead.

But not alone the throbs that brought
The tale of horror to our ears
Bore back the solace of our grief
And took the tribute of our tears
To those who most in need might be
Of our deep welling sympathy.

So [illegible] Death's victory snatched away
Even when greatest it would seem—
It thought to crush, destroy, divide—
But that has been a short lived dream.
All that near sighted Death has done
Has been to make two peoples one.

Our friendship closer had become
As we each other's worth immersed
The mists that long had filled the air
Had slowly, surely, been dispersed.
One thing remained—of all things chief—
We both should share a mutual grief.

That now is ours as mourners joined
New cause for union is revealed
We need not fear that aught will break
The treaty that Death's hand has sealed
For dread for doubt there is no room
When hands are clasped across a tomb.

STRIKING EYEGLASSES

It is the common opinion, says the Jewelers' Circular Weekly, that for striking a man with glasses on there is a severer penalty than for striking him under similar circumstances when he is not wearing glasses. Careful search, however, does not bring forth any statutory provision which declares the offense greater when the man who is struck wears glasses. The prevalence of this idea is due no doubt to the probability of the judge in such cases giving the convicted the extreme penalty. The legal term for assault under such circumstances is "mayhem," signifying that the assailant has, in one way or another, deprived his victim of the power of defending himself.

During an altercation from which a struggle is apt to ensue anyone wearing glasses would be wise to remove them, unobserved if possible, however, because if noticed it might act as a signal to begin hostilities.

Many think that glasses would be a source of general protection in these cases, and often take advantage of that ground, but this is wrong because no court would hold it worse to strike a man with glasses than one without, unless the assailant struck directly at his opponent's eyes with the intent to wound or maim him, and whether one were hit elsewhere than on the eyeglasses would not enter the case at all.

EVERY SPRING IS GREENER

I was walking with the senator to catch the early train,
The senator with stocks and bonds galore,
And for fit commercial phrases I was cudgeling my brain
When, quite unexpectedly,
Said the senator to me:
"Somehow this spring seems greener than any spring before."

I see no special reason, and it was not always so,
But I've noticed it a dozen years or more,
And I wonder whether others, when the grass begins to grow
Bright enough to catch the eye,
Feel about it as do I
That each new spring is greener than any spring before."

The senator is hearty, but his crown is growing gray,
His years are fifty three or fifty four,
And this may not be the reason, but I rather think it may,
For the contrast with the snow
On his head perhaps may show
Why the green each spring seems greener than any spring before.

Youth, they say, is Love's own season, but they know not what they mean.
Youth's a butterfly that wings the garden o'er
Seeking gaudy flowers that perish, while in age that glides serene
Down life's snowy slope,
Stronger grows immortal hope,
And every spring is greener than any spring before.

A CINCINNATI CASE.

From the Chicago Inter-Ocean

Tylor Field, capitalist and social leader of Cincinnati, was arrested on Sunday for driving his automobile over the fashionable boulevards of that city at a rate of speed a shade faster than the law allows.

There were other interesting features connected with his case, but the one that properly claims our attention grows out of his appearance in court next morning, when, according to one of the leading descriptive writers of the Cincinnati press, he wore a polka dot tie, tan shoes, a long gray overcoat and some other things, all of which harmonized perfectly with themselves and his position in society.

There is more than a suggestion here for these male social leaders who expect to be arrested for violating the automobile ordinances and for those who expect to be arrested for violating automobile ordinances and for those who expect to be summoned to appear in a police court next morning to answer to the charge. There is a warning for it accomplished descriptive writers are to be assigned to the duty of telling the public what they had on when they paid their fines the social leaders must have on things that will stand description.

It is easy to see how this innovation may lead to the establishment of a new and independent social and fashion news department for the exclusive use of gentlemen automobilists. It stands to reason that some outlet must be provided for notes of this character.

Those who saw Willie Diversey Clybourn pay his fine at Glencoe yesterday noticed that he wore two-button mauve gloves.

Some of the smartest of our young men prefer to be arrested in clocked socks.

Fifty-dollar fines are almost invariably paid in Parson scarfs. Only those who have not caught up with the mode will wear creased trousers with a barred shirt.

Charlie LaSalle never appears in the Evanston police court unless he has on a purple waistcoat and pink shoes.

North Shore policemen carry toilet cases for the use of those whom they expect to arrest. A small fee is always expected and those who anticipate arrest should carry this in a beaded purse.

A nice way to appear in court on the next morning is in a lavender raincoat carelessly flung back in front so as to expose one's polka dots.

Harry Ogden Ashland made a sensation in the Lake View police station the other morning by paying his fine in fives edged with Irish point.

It is en regle to give only the tips of the fingers of the left hand to the policeman as you descend from the auto, although some of the North Shore officers are forbidden to receive tips of any kind.

Some of the leading haberdasheries are showing beautiful things in gentlemen's lingerie this season.

Certain common fellows who evade fines by driving slowly through the suburbs would have it appear that they have been frequently arrested. They try to deceive people who know better by shouting at the policemen, "Not today!" "Not this time," etc. Most of them wear readymade clothes and the policemen are not deceived.

The possibilities of a department of this kind are too apparent to require comment.

TO MAKE NEW YORK IMPREGNABLE.

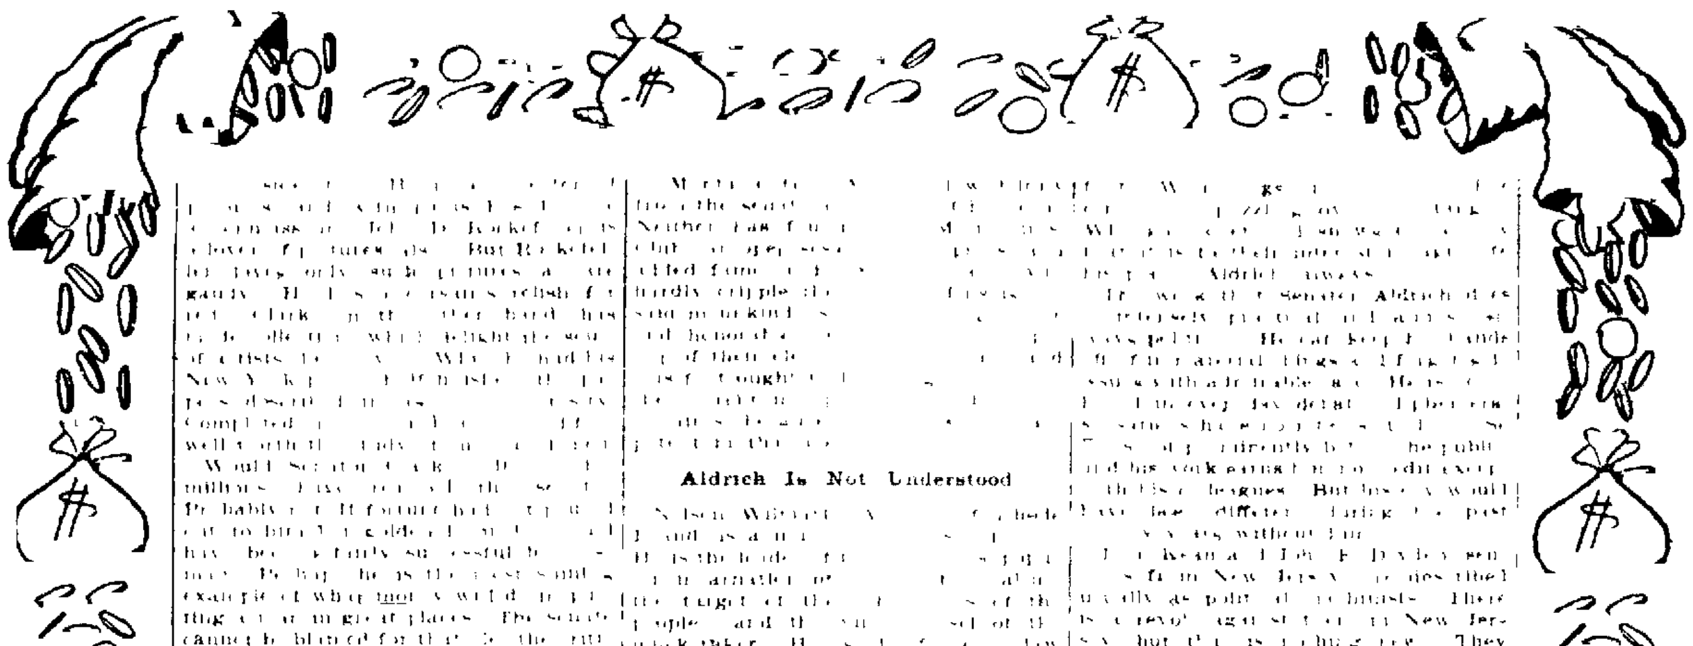

"Very new and modern are the almost automatic and entirely impregnable coast-defense forts," writes M. C. Sullivan in Technical World Magazine for June. "So modern indeed that the installation of comparatively few of them has been completed. But so complete is the confidence of all the experts in their inviolability that $50,000,000 is to be spent at once by the United States alone in the perfection of its coast defense. Of this amount, at least one million will be expended at Forts Hamilton and Schuyler guarding the harbor of New York.

"In coast-defense work the first necessity is to be always prepared for attack—never to be caught napping. With this idea in view small ships of a new type and great speed are being built for scouting purposes. Telephone systems supplementing the telegraph are being built along the whole coastline, each station connected with the nearest fortress. Coast guards and lookouts are being furnished with portable searchlights and each observer will carry with him a portable telephone, the receiver clamped to his ear, so that he may be in constant touch with the officer in command of the fire-control station. More remarkable still is the firing periscope, a scientific combination of telescope and camera which will automatically take snapshots showing the details of everything visible on land and water within a distance of ten or even twenty miles.

"In practice it has been found possible to locate a target five or six miles away, make the necessary calculation, aim and fire a gun, and drop a shot exactly on the specified spot, all within three or four minutes.

36 UNITED STATES senators—less than one half of the total membership of that body—are easily worth over $340,000,000. In addition to the senators named in this list there are half a dozen others whose possessions mount toward a million each. Frank B. Brandegee of Connecticut is one. Charles A. Culberson of Texas is another. Lee S. Overman of North Carolina is well fixed. Henry E. Burnham of New Hampshire is in comfortable circumstances, so is his neighbor William P. Dillingham of Vermont, and Frank P. Flint of California can scrape together more than half a million.

It is unquestionably true, therefore, that the senate is in a sense a millionaires' club. But when scrutiny is made of the source of the wealth of these men, it will be found that the old-fashioned virtues of thrift, enterprise, economy, hard work and persistence are entitled to most of the credit for the piled-up millions. The money in the senate represents, in other words, honesty rather than dishonesty. The term "millionaires' club" can not be applied altogether in reproach. The riches of the earth have contributed most of this wealth, and the rest of it to a great extent has been gathered by men of superior physical and mental power, aided by good fortune and general prosperity. Some of it, of course, may be questionable money, yet the proportion of "taint" in this huge pile is surprisingly small. It is almost negligible when compared with the quality of the money held by any equal number of men engaged in business. Make a list of New York plutocrats, for example, and compare their millions with those owned by United States senators. The comparison will be in favor of the senators. Their money is cleaner.

Millionaires Mostly Republicans

It will be seen that the majority of the rich men of the senate are Republicans. This might have a sinister meaning if it were not for the fact that these Republican millionaires are all northerners. The wealth of the country is in the north, and as the north is Republican it sends Republicans to the senate. If the north should become Democratic, it is probable that as many Democratic millionaires would find their way to the senate as there are now Republicans.

There is no real basis, therefore, for the oft-repeated charge that the senate is controlled by millionaires for millionaires through the mechanism of the Republican party. Wealth is accumulated without regard to political lines. With the rapid development of the south, fortunes are being made, and in due time Democratic millionaires will appear from that section in the senate. Already the two Texas senators are classed as millionaires, or very near it, and one or two other southern senators are rich. The great majority of them, however, are classed as poor men. And this is no reflection upon them, nor does it entitle them to additional honor.

The fact is that the United States senate is a democratic body, where a man's personal possessions cut no figure whatever in weighing his influence. He speaks for a state of the union, and if he impresses his fellows, it is because of his ability, and not because of his wealth. The most tedious speaker in the senate is the richest man in that body. His influence with his colleagues is no greater because of his riches.

Money Not in Control.

The senate happens to contain nearly two score millionaires. Does this mean that money controls it in its deliberations and in its actions? A careful study of the inside workings of the senate forces the conclusion that it does not. The senate is necessarily democratic. The states were placed forever by the fathers upon an equal footing. The right of the states to equal suffrage in the senate was regarded of such importance by the makers of the constitution that they placed that provision beyond the possibility of amendment. It is the only clause of the constitution that cannot be amended by the people of the United States.

The office of United States senator has become the most honorable and desirable as well as the most influential, in the government, next to the presidency itself. A senator is an ambassador from a sovereign state, attending a convention of ambassadors of equal rank with himself. The limitations of greatness in such an office have never been defined, even by such men as Webster and Clay. There were potencies of statesmanship in the office which even they did not exhaust. It is this which attracts to that great body men of superlative ability.

The senate is the goal of ambition of many rich as well as great men. Some of these rich men are notable only for their money. They wield power in their respective states and thereby win the senatorship. But does their power extend into the senate through the mere weight of money? Possibly, to some ex-[illegible] but not to the extent that is popularly supposed. Character, brains and long service count for more than any other attribute. As on the floor of the senate every man is the equal of the others, he is rated almost entirely by the ability he displays as a senator, and not by the prominence he may enjoy in his own state.

Men Are Gauged Unerringly.

Many a rich man of moderate ability, as senators go, has endeavored to gain influence by the lavish use of his wealth in the way of entertainment, splendid display and conferring of favors. The result has been failure. If a senator cannot wield influence through industry, long service and ability, [illegible] gain it by other methods. Of course public men are human [illegible] more human nature among them than anywhere else, and they like a good dinner, brilliant company and the [illegible] of life. But they gauge with [illegible] accuracy the mental and moral caliber of their colleagues, and accord to them the influence to which they are justly entitled, and no more. [illegible] to place in the United States [illegible] shallow pretense is more quickly exposed, no place where superficiality is more promptly measured, and no place where actual merit is more generously acknowledged.

The Croesus of the senate, William A. Clark of Montana, attracts no attention there because of his wealth. He speaks rarely, and then in an uncertain, schoolmaster-like fashion. He devotes his attention almost entirely to western questions, irrigation, forestry, mining, agriculture, etc. On certain subjects he is well posted, and his colleagues avail themselves of his information. Mr. Clark wisely avoids any attempt to pose as a statesman or a maker of laws. He is a member of the committee on foreign relations, but he rarely attends the meetings of the committee and exerts no influence whatever in that direction. He is merely a sturdy, grim, industrious senator, looking out for the interests of his state with the same degree of thoroughness as if he were relying upon his salary. He investigates pension claims, visits the departments for constituents, and otherwise performs his duties in the lower branches of his office.

Wealth Came from the Ground

Senator Clark's millions were made, as everybody knows, out of the ground. His wealth is estimated at $200,000,000. It may be much more, but it is not less than that figure. He was offered $170,000,000 for the United Verde mine. He refused because the wealth is safer in the mine than it would be in banks or lands. It is a bank that cannot be robbed, and his drafts upon it are always honored. He has made additional millions—nobody knows how many—by acquiring forest lands in the west, and although there was a public outcry against his methods some years ago, it is only fair to say that the vigilant eye of old Ethan Allen Hitchcock, secretary of the interior, has failed to detect anything improper in Senator Clark's acquisition of the public lands.

Senator Clark has made himself an expert in business affairs. Aladdin-like luck showered millions upon him, and shrewd Scotch sense saved him from becoming a spendthrift or a debauchee. He studied mining law, railroading, and financiering. He mastered the details of multifarious affairs, adjusted the load of his wealth, and systematized his business so that he is now able to sit at the key and manipulate a business that affects hundreds of thousands of people. He delights in applying money to the development of natural resources. Contriving a new railroad is to him a source of pleasant study. The mass of work involved becomes fun instead of toil.

This monarch of millions [illegible] his [illegible] since [illegible] [illegible] Rockefeller [illegible] But Rockefeller [illegible] [illegible] Clark [illegible] New York [illegible] Would Senator Clark [illegible] millions [illegible] Probably [illegible] [illegible] fairly successful [illegible] [illegible] He is the best example of what money will do [illegible] in great places. The senate cannot be blamed for that. [illegible] look to the Montana legislature [illegible] enough to point out that [illegible] has sent this [illegible] to the senate. [illegible] it is his [illegible] members [illegible]

Quite another type of [illegible] is Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia, who is credited with possessing [illegible] than any other senator, with the exception of Senator Clark. The Montana senator is acquisitive, but he did not make his money through this trait. Other senators have ability to pile up millions, but they are not [illegible] acquisitive. Senator Elkins frankly acknowledges his delight in exercising his gift of acquisitiveness. He is a natural born accumulator. His trading instinct is sharper than a Yankee's. It was he who dickered with a [illegible] agent [illegible] this thing [illegible] that until [illegible] toward [illegible]

Why [illegible] asked the senator [illegible]

"Why [illegible] You've asked for everything of the machine except the ability to talk and figure [illegible] long [illegible] to finish its education."

How Elkins Got His Start

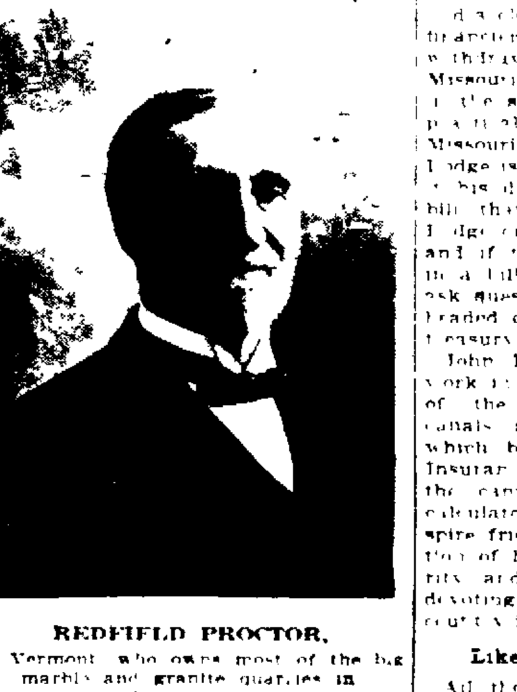

Senator Elkins has had his share of [illegible] He went to New Mexico [illegible] incidentally could not resist [illegible] the Spanish language. His field, however, was in West Virginia, where he has used the plowshares of his genius to unearth countless wealth from coal mines, railroads, farms, banks, and so on. His wealth is estimated at $20,000,000, but it may be twice as much. With all his acquisitions Senator Elkins has never acquired that habit of telling all he knows. He has failed to take the public into his confidence as to the amount of his earnings. Once, when he saw a good chance to turn an honest penny, he planked down $15,000,000 in hard cash for a railroad. It is worth more now than when he bought it—of course, it is, or he would have sold it. Money does not dawdle in the hands of Stephen Benton Elkins. He is a hard worker himself and he makes his money work too. Nothing pleases him better than to see his money "get a move on" and multiply itself. He is fond of horses, but the science of money-breeding presents a more attractive field to his restless energy.

There is nothing of the hypocrite or circumlocutor about Senator Elkins. When he is after a thing he says so, and his onslaught follows directly upon the announcement. He takes short cuts, thinks in short sentences, speaks compactly, and never worries. His big body is surmounted by a big, round, shapely head. His health is always rugged. He eats little and drinks less. Like most men of great affairs his brain is geared high, running far ahead of the minds of mediocre men. He can keep ten clerks busy without losing the pink in his cheeks. His mental engines are always under full steam. It would be easier to imagine Theodore Roosevelt in drooping mood than to think of "Steve" Elkins as anything but alert.

Alger Is a Lumber Prince.

Gen. Russell A. Alger, of Michigan, is credited with the possession of $20,000,000. He is a lumber prince, an owner of forests, mines, mills and factories. He began early and worked late in the acquisition of a fortune. Since the Spanish war Gen. Alger's health has been wretched, and he has gradually lessened the tension of business demands. Although he served with distinction in the civil war, rising to command rank, and later sat in McKinley's cabinet as secretary of war, his "stronghold" has been business and not statesmanship. He is nevertheless a good politician and knows what's what. He has rarely spoken in the senate.

One of his statesmanlike utterances was that if the statehood bill passed he would withdraw his investments from Arizona. This to him was an unanswerable argument. Like Senator Clark,

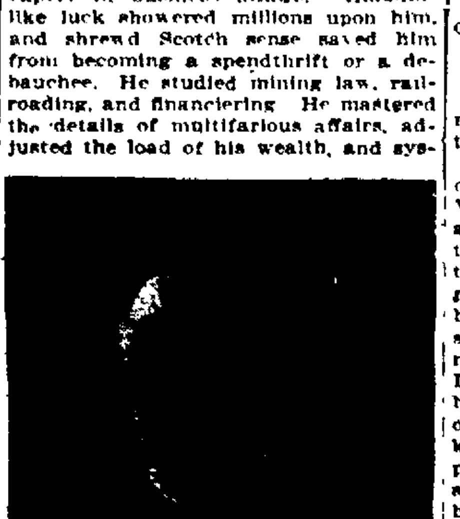

REDFIELD PROCTOR,

Of Vermont, who owns most of the big marble and granite quarries in the country.

EUGENE HALE,

Of Maine. He married the daughter of "Zach" Chandler, and thereby became rich.

NATHAN B. SCOTT,

Of West Virginia. Like his colleague, Elkins, he is interested in mines and railroads.

Aldrich Is Not Understood

Nelson W. Aldrich [illegible] It is the [illegible] the target of the [illegible] people, and [illegible] stock taker [illegible] of John D. Rockefeller [illegible] enough. He refuses [illegible] stuff. Is [illegible] prosperity [illegible] industry. He [illegible] doesn't [illegible] the senate by [illegible]

It may have [illegible]

Jest so it [illegible]
The [illegible]

[illegible] aim of the robber [illegible] magnates and [illegible] system and the banditti of [illegible] gather money [illegible] Senator [illegible] the spokesman [illegible] manager of [illegible] ought to be the richest man [illegible] ate if not in the world. He [illegible] hold by the neck the [illegible] of [illegible] to stand at the throttle [illegible] man of the committee on finance [illegible] power to change the tariff to suit himself and his friends. If that is so, what is to prevent him from becoming richer than anybody else? If he is absolute dictator of the senate and is as unscrupulous as he is pictured, where are the results of his masterful manipulations?

Senator Aldrich's wealth is put down here at about $10,000,000. He made it mostly in street railroad operations, consolidations and extensions. Although he has been in the senate since 1881, being fifth among senators in length of continuous service, he has had time to build up a fortune that is not inordinate as fortunes go nowadays. If he had devoted his remarkable abilities as assiduously to money making as Senator Elkins has he would probably have been worth one-tenth of a billion by this time. Mr. Aldrich is not a money grubber by any means. He has performed invaluable service to his country and to his party through the exercise of his peculiar qualities of mind, but the prospects are that the good he has done will not be acknowledged until after his death. A sketch of his make-up may help to explain why he is painted in colors mostly black.

Popular With His Colleagues.

Senator Aldrich, in the first place, is physically and mentally a man of exquisite symmetry and equilibrium. He is well proportioned, perfectly healthy, and well endowed with strength. His motions are lively as a boy's, although he is grandfather of the richest baby in the world. The workings of his mind are equally quick. He is capable of long and exacting toil. In the second place, his prepossessing exterior is supplemented with astonishing gifts of conciliation and "management of men." No senator equals him as a "mixer." He knows men, gains their good will, helps them, and draws them to him through a kind of magnetism that is not as much affection as it is confidence and admiration.

A third salient point in Senator Aldrich's make-up is his unique combination of hard sense and imagination. His ability to separate facts from figments amounts to genius. Like another famous man he "has an unerring sense of the jugular." He takes the measure of situations as quickly as he measures men. Then, having ascertained the truth, his imagination strikes out here and there, blazing trails, seeking a way out. He has suggested many a solution to knotty problems, and some of his solutions have been as pure exercises of the imaginative faculty as was the writing of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Why He Is the Leader.

Now, this senator is a strong partisan. He believes in the Republican party and is always ready to fight for it. Is it any wonder that with his peculiar gifts he should lead his party colleagues? Who scents danger more quickly? Who perceives the facts [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] When [illegible] it is to their interest [illegible] [illegible] Aldrich always [illegible] [illegible] Senator Aldrich does [illegible] interests [illegible] says [illegible] He can keep [illegible] [illegible] issue with [illegible] [illegible] details [illegible] [illegible] currently [illegible] the public and his work [illegible] his colleagues. But his [illegible] would have been different during the past [illegible] years without him.

John Kean and John F. Dryden, senators from New Jersey, are classed [illegible] as political [illegible]. There is a revolt against them in New Jersey, but [illegible] They are supposed [illegible] in the senate as representatives of the money power. But they are [illegible] It has [illegible] [illegible] bag senator [illegible] reaching the senate [illegible] has been [illegible] traditions of that great [illegible] something better. What is [illegible] senate if one does not [illegible] such men as Leland Stanford be [illegible] [illegible] the wealth of the country. This is [illegible] John Kean and John F. Dryden.

Got Money by Inheritance

Mr. Kean is a bachelor. He inherited most of his money and [illegible] [illegible] has $8,000,000 of Pennsylvania railroad securities. He is a [illegible] of New York trust companies, a bank director, and a close friend of New York's great financiers. [illegible] since the withdrawal of Senator Cockrell of Missouri has given much of his time in the senate to the scrutiny of bills [illegible] succeeding the veteran Missourian as a watchdog. Senator Lodge is another [illegible] who takes it his duty to keep an eye on every bill that passes the senate. Either Lodge or Kean is always at the door, and if there is anything questionable in a bill one or the other is sure to ask questions. In this way they have headed off more than [illegible] raid on the treasury.

John F. Dryden does his share of work in committees. He is a member of the committee on interoceanic canals, and the same business sense which built up the great Prudential Insurance company comes into play in the canal committee. He is a cold calculator, with little about him to inspire friendship, but there is no question of his business ability and integrity, and as little question that he is devoting it to the best interest of the country in canal matters.

Like His Granite Quarries.

All the granite and marble in the United States, if not in the world, seems to be controlled, directly or indirectly, by Redfield Proctor, of Vermont, former secretary of war. He owns quarries in many states, and furnishes stone for a skyscraper as handily as a baker turns over pies.

Something of the immovable, cold quality of his product seems to be in him. He is regarded by his colleagues as a "cold proposition." As chairman of the committee on agriculture, he wields great influence and Vermont gets its share of his attention. Mr. Proctor acted as temporary chairman of the committee on military affairs for some years, and his experience as head of the war department was of great value to the senate. In matters not affecting Vermont, Senator Proctor's advice is usually sound and able. He takes little part, however, in general debate. The power of the senate to enliven a man's sense of duty to the whole country has not made as much impression upon the granolithic Mr. Proctor as it has upon many other men.

A comparison of this point is furnished by Philander Chase Knox, of Pennsylvania. Popular opinion, especially in the west, pictures Mr. Knox as the agent of corporate interests. Even Mr. Tillman labored under this view, and he intimated in the senate that Mr. Knox was the attorney for the Pennsylvania railroad, and we therefore hardly a suitable adviser of the president. Mr. Knox's reply was instant and sweeping. He declared that he had never been employed in any capacity by the Pennsylvania railroad. Mr. Knox is a member of the interoceanic canals committee and other important committees. He performs very valuable services in the senate by reason of his great legal ability, and is withal a modest, companionable senator.

Strange Ways for a [illegible]

If he is an enemy of his country, he goes about the work of betraying it in strange fashion [illegible] for his suggestions are usually accepted by men whose loyalty has been proved by a lifetime of work. The truth is that Mr. Knox, like other great lawyers, is blamed for the sins of their clients. This popular prejudice would keep Knox from the presidency, as it will keep Elihu Root. Yet either would unquestionably rank with the greatest men who have ever filled that office. Mr. Knox is moderately rich, and if he had been a mere money-maker he could have been worth much more.

The eclipse of Chauncey M. Depew is total and permanent. The jovial Chauncey is jovial no more. Night sessions of the senate are no longer made debonair by the vision of the smug New Yorker floating in from the cloakroom attired in evening clothes, smiling and joking, idle and shallow, casting his eye up to the galleries and revelling in publicity while his colleagues are wrestling with the logjam of conference reports. Depew appeared in the senate once or twice after the insurance earthquake, but it was no place for him, and he faded away to be seen no more. He is an old, broken, discredited sport of fate, and his millions of money do him no good. He was never effective as a senator. He would not attend committee meetings nor perform his share of the drudgery. His speeches did not contribute to the popular education, however agreeable they were to the ear. The senate performed its work without his help while he was present and goes on without missing him. Senators shake their heads when his name is mentioned with an expression of pain and regret, and quickly turn the current of talk. So let him pass.

George Peabody Wetmore of Rhode Island, Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, and Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania were born with golden spoons in their mouths. Mr. Wetmore's fortune is put down in this estimate at $4,000,000, but some people think he is easily worth $10,000,000. He never speaks in the senate if he can avoid it. In committee work he is effective whenever he cares to speak, but he is one of the few public men who is not reaching out for publicity. His colleagues on the committee on appropriations, the big working committee, say that Mr. Wetmore is misjudged by reason of his silence. They say he does his share of work and does it well. He gives fine dinners and enjoys life quietly.

Lodge Is a Hard Worker.

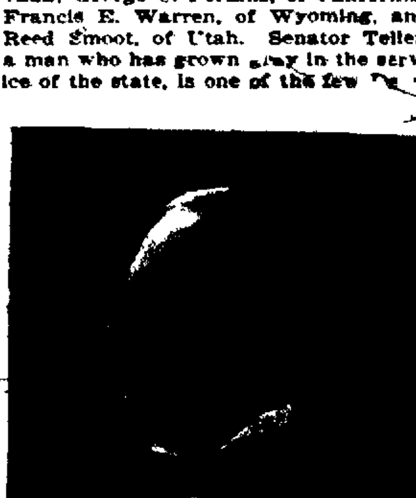

Senator Lodge has added to his inherited wealth by a lifetime of hard work and by good investments. He is the hardest worker in the senate. He turns out literary work constantly, is daily in his seat, participates in all important legislation and finds time to dig into history. Money is a convenience to him, not a master. Nobody ever seems to think of his integrity—it is a part of him, taken for granted. His daily grind in the senate, watching every bill that comes up, is of immense service to the country.

Among those who have hewed fortunes out of the forests of opportunity in the west are Henry M. Teller and Thomas M. Patterson, of Colorado, Levi Ankeny and Samuel H. Piles, of Washington, George S. Nixon, of Nevada, George C. Perkins, of California; Francis E. Warren, of Wyoming, and Reed Smoot, of Utah. Senator Teller, a man who has grown gray in the service of the state, is one of the few [illegible] ocrats of the senate who are not dependent upon their salaries. He has prospered with the prosperity of his state. His colleague, Senator Patterson, owns two newspapers and earns large fees as an attorney. Mr. Piles, of Seattle, was a [illegible] adviser of J. J. Hill, and made money in the phenomenal development of the northwest. Senator Ankeny, his colleague, is a typically a westerner. Ankeny was a freighter, a cattle breeder, a rancher, and an Indian fighter. He owns a string of banks now, and has cattle on a thousand hills. Senator Nixon, of Nevada, is also a banker. He began life as a telegrapher. He is full of western energy and daring. Mr. Newlands, of Nevada, is a lawyer, who became wealthy by marriage and increased his holdings by investment in Washington real estate.

PHILANDER C. KNOX,

Of Pennsylvania, a lawyer with the ability to command big fees.

JOSEPH B. FORAKER,

Of Ohio. A successful lawyer who received big fees and made fortunate investments.

The Senate's Only Sailor.

Senator Perkins is the only sailor in the senate. He ran away to sea from Kennebunkport, Maine, when under fourteen years of age. At seventeen he was clerk in a grocery store at Oroville, California. The owner of a wheezy steamboat on the Sacramento river became discouraged when his boat ran on a sandbar, and young Perkins bought the boat with borrowed money. Within a year he owned the boat outright, all debts paid, and had $2,500 cash. He went into the shipping business at San Francisco and made millions.

Reed Smoot, of Utah, apostle in the Mormon church, has a hand in the great business interests of that organization. He is a banker, farmer, manufacturer and sheep owner. His fortune is rapidly increasing.

Francis E. Warren, of Wyoming, owns electric light and power works, farms, mines and sheep ranges. His wealth also is increasing with the development of the west.

Morgan G. Bulkeley, of Connecticut, is president of the Aetna Life Insurance company. He is one of the solid men of New England in every sense. His service in the senate has been brief, but already his sound business qualities have made their impression. His neighbor, W. Murray Crane, of Massachusetts, who was head of the great Crane paper factories at Dalton, is a younger and livelier man, who has taken high rank in the senate. He never made a speech and does not aspire to fame in that direction, but he is equaled as a "mixer" only by Senator Aldrich. It is believed that Senator Crane has a better chance than any other man of becoming the leader of the senate as the successor of Aldrich. He has many of Aldrich's gifts of conciliation and combination, with a pleasant humor and engaging personality. When he became a senator he transferred his great business interests to his son, but it is safe to say that he has a snug fortune of three or four millions laid away.

Vice President Well Fixed.

Vice President Fairbanks is included in the list of millionaires in the senate, though he is not now a senator, of course. He has made money in the law, and is interested in banks and manufacturing institutions of Indiana and Illinois. Contrary to universal newspaper comment, Mr. Fairbanks is an affable, charming gentleman, warm-hearted and sympathetic. As a presiding officer he has displayed great ability, and his fairness is unfailing.

Arthur P. Gorman's wealth was made in railroads, real estate and general investments. The estimate of $2,000,000 is probably too conservative in his case. He has loved power more than money, like many other senators, who could have piled up millions if they had turned their energies in the direction of money-making. Nathan B. Scott, of West Virginia, is a manufacturer, with almost as keen business sense as is possessed by his colleague. Joseph B. Foraker, of Ohio, has been very successful in practicing law. He received big fees and made fortunate investments. But he has never really tried to make money, taking more pleasure in public business and politics.

It will surprise many people to learn that Joseph W. Bailey, of Texas, is a millionaire. He received one fee of $250,000, and as he didn't happen to need the money he invested it in such a way as to make it worth much more. That was not the only fee he ever secured, either. He owns a couple of farms in the Bluegrass region, another big farm in Texas and other valuable property. With his legal ability, and living in a country of remarkable growth, it would have been strange if he had remained poor. He is not a fortune seeker, however, and money-making is only an incident in his career.

Owns Chicago Real Estate.

James B. McCreary, of Kentucky, is another senator whose wealth was not suspected. He has large holdings of Chicago real estate, and [illegible] of the landed aristocracy of [illegible] whose fortunes are not advertised.

The others making up the grand [illegible] of rich [illegible] in the senate [illegible] Thomas S. Martin, of Virginia, James P. Taliaferro, of Florida [illegible] may be worth a million each. Martin is a lawyer and [illegible] big fees. He owns Virginia [illegible] has a hand in manufacturing enterprises. HUTCHISON AND BENTLEY BREAK UP GAME IN SIXTH DEFEATING TERRORS.

RAGGED PAYING FAILS TO MAR A SENSATIONAL CONTEST. HIGH SCHOOL'S HITS ARE SCATTERED.

Cutler, 8; High School, 7.

Actor Hutchison, third cozy-corner warden for the Cutler baseball club, and his confederate, Athlete Bentley, who is the left section guard for the same [illegible], took a sudden fit of binglitinis Saturday afternoon at Washburn field before they recovered. High school was frantically asking if there was a doctor in the crowd. Hence the figures which you will notice posted near the upper part of this tale of trouble.

Hutchison wielded his walloping willow wand with effect for a starter. After the High school had made sundry runs totaling seven, while the red hat rappers had gathered in a lonely bunch of three in the sixth session of the debate, Mr. Hutchison was stricken with this peculiar disease for which there has been found no cure. Slapping the sphere daintily somewhere in the region of the 16th stitch on the upper right-hand seam, he drove it effectively to the far regions for four cushions on the circuit. Brother Bentley then arrived and registered as among those present. Mr. Bentley is a tall man with a smile. He grasped his bingle buster in both hands and scowled at Mr. Stovell, the tall twirler from this village. When Mr. Bentley got through his connection with the innocent little leather-covered thing, it had disappeared. It was gone a long time. When it finally put in an appearance, Mr. Bentley was taking a drink of water from a bucket. Two runlets scampered over ahead of the hit. Mr. Stovell remembered an engagement he had to study cloud effects in the left garden and betook himself thence.

Hits Less Frequent.

Howe, who succeeded him, was a [illegible] young man with the safe slant, and had it not been for a bunch of ocher-tinted stunts in the fielding line, the game might have been going yet.

It was quite an affair from the start. Several people did things, the High school doing most of it in the early rounds. In fact Cutler played like a city council investigating a graft charge for some few moments. High school, on the other hand, was gathering in runlets and binglets with monotonous regularity and the bugs in the bleachers were betting seven-dollar bills that there would be a 23 sign hung out for the Cutler gang with some ease. Then the bingle brothers, Hutch and Bent, arranged themselves in front of the camera and it was finished.

ACCIDENT AT START MARS BERMUDA YACHT RACE

NEW YORK, May 26.—The 6,000-mile race of small yachts from New York to Bermuda for a $500 cup offered by Sir Thomas Lipton was started from the Brooklyn Yacht club in Gravesend bay today, but was interrupted before the boats passed the Sandy Hook bar, when the leading boat, the yawl Lila, carried away her foretopmast. The Lila returned to the club, but was accompanied by the Tamerlane, her closest competitor. It was reported tonight that the Gauntlet, the smallest of the three, kept on, evidently intending to sail over the course and take the cup, but the regatta committee is in doubt whether she proceeded. If the Gauntlet sails over the course she will take the cup. Otherwise the race will be started over again. The last report from the Gauntlet came from the Sandy Hook lightship. The boat had taken a southeasterly course.

WHITE FLAG FLYING IN WESTERN LEAGUE FIGHT

OMAHA, May 26.—An armistice was agreed upon in the threatened Western baseball league war this afternoon. The managers of all clubs arrived in this city today in response to a call issued by Vice President Munk, of the league, for a meeting tonight to take action on the trouble between Cantillon, of the Des Moines team, and Rourke, of Omaha. This afternoon Cantillon applied to the district court for an injunction restraining the managers from meeting tonight, but soon afterward a mutual agreement was reached that a meeting be held June 4, provided President O'Neil does not call one earlier.

OPENING GAME OF GOLFING SEASON DECORATION DAY

The summer golfing season will be opened in Colorado Springs on Wednesday, Decoration day, when the teams of the Town and Gown club and the Cheyenne Mountain country club will play their return match game on the Town and Gown links. BYERS LOSES TO TRAVERS IN GOLF TOURNEY

PITTSBURG MAN TAKES LEAD AT START BUT FAILS TOWARD FINISH.

THE FIRST TOUR OF LINKS IS PLAYED IN MORNING, LAST ROUND DURING THE AFTERNOON.

NEW YORK, May 26.—Jerome D. Travers, of Montclair, N. J., won the Metropolitan Golf association's championship today on the links of the St. Andrews Golf club. He defeated Eben M. Byers, of Pittsburg, who played as a member of St. Andrews, by three up and one to play. The final round consisted of 36 holes match play, the first tour of the links being played in the forenoon and the other in the afternoon. Travers began badly and was two down at the end of the first nine. Byers held the lead until the fourteenth green, where Travers squared. Travers won the thirty-first. Byers pulled his drive from the thirty-second tee and lost the hole, and as the next two holes were halved, Travers was dormie 2. He won the thirty-fifth hole 4 to 5 and the match.

Wild Bill Donovan got off the following good story: "It is funny how a little occurrence will linger in one's memory. One day when I was with Brooklyn the Quakers came to town and beat me about 14 to 1. As we were walking off the field I saw big Ed Delehanty sitting on the bench with his handkerchief to his eyes. 'What is the matter, Del?' I asked. 'You slighted me,' he sobbed. 'Slighted you how?' I inquired. 'I'm the only man on our team you didn't hit with the ball,' said Del."

Manager Rourke is the luckiest man in the country in picking up third basemen. Rourke of this year's crop will be ripe for picking by some major league club this fall.

CORNELL WINS OVER EASTERN TRACK TEAMS

ITHACANS HAVE NO TROUBLE AT ALL IN DEFEATING OTHER BIG COLLEGES.

ONE MILE RUN TAKEN IN ALL THREE PLACES BY WEARERS OF RED AND WHITE.

BOSTON, May 26.—The athletic representatives of Cornell university closed a most successful two days' engagement here today by winning the intercollegiate championship for the second time. The Ithacans scored 38 points, 20 of which were made in the distance runs. Pennsylvania was second with 23 points, Harvard third with 21 and Yale fourth with 19.

One new intercollegiate record was established by Jackson of Cornell and Grant of Harvard, who cleared the bar in the pole vault at 11 feet 10⅝ inches. The old record, made by Dray of Yale, was an inch lower.

The great race of the day, and the event which clinched Cornell's title to the championship, was the two mile run. It was expected that Stone of Harvard and Hail of Yale would fight it out again today, but the Cornell runners completely outdistanced them. In the last quarter three Cornell men drew rapidly away and sprinted as if they were in a hundred yard dash. Magoffin beat Trubee to the tape by a foot, while Wilgoose was a close third. The three scored nine points for Cornell.

About the same time Jackson of Cornell cleared the bar in the pole vault at a record-breaking height, and a few minutes previously the Ithacans had won a first and fourth in the quarter mile. All doubt as to the outcome was then settled, but the half mile brought eight and the mile five additional points to the Ithacans. Summaries:

Mile—Haskins, Pennsylvania, first; Lewis, Cornell, second; Simpson, Cornell, third; Minot, Harvard, fourth. Time, 4:29 1-5.

440-yard dash—Rogers, Cornell, first; Dives, Harvard, second; Collison, Lafayette, third; Herr, Cornell, fourth. Time, [illegible] 1-5.

120-yard hurdle—Hubbard, Amherst, first; Castleman, Colgate, second; Shaw, Dartmouth, third; Turner, Cornell, fourth. Time, 15 4-5.

Two-mile run—Magoffin, Cornell, first; Trubee, Cornell, second; Wilgoose, Cornell, third; Hale, Yale, fourth. Time, 9:56.

Hammer throw—Herr, Syracuse, first; Cook, Cornell, second; Shevlin, Yale, third; Gage, Dartmouth, fourth. Distance, 147 feet 9½ inches.

220-yard hurdles—Castleman, Colgate, first; Young, Syracuse, second; Hubbard, Amherst, third; Armstrong, Princeton, fourth. Time, 25 1-5.

Broad jump—Sheffield, Yale, first; Knox, Yale, second; Webber, Stevens, third; Simmons, Princeton, fourth. Distance, 22 feet 4½ inches.

220-yard dash—Cartwell, Pennsylvania, first; Witham, Pennsylvania, second; Dodge, Harvard, third; Robinson, Yale, fourth. Time, 22 3-5.

Pole vault—Jackson, Cornell, and Grant, Harvard, tied for first; Gilbert, Yale, Moore, Princeton, and Phillips, Cornell, tied for third. Height, 11 feet 10⅝ inches.

High jump—Marshall, Yale, first; Moffatt, Pennsylvania, Clark and Roosevelt, Harvard, tied for second. Height, 5 feet 11 inches.

100-yard dash—Cartwell, Pennsylvania, first; Witham, Pennsylvania, second; Gamble, Princeton, third; Ford, Harvard, fourth. Time, 10 1-5.

IN THE GLARE OF THE SPORTING SEARCHLIGHT

By DUFF K. DUNCAN.

Should any action be taken by Colorado college men after the game yesterday between Cutler academy and the High school result in the loss to that institution of such a coach as J. R. Richards, it would be deplorable to say the least. Whatever the truth of the matter may be, hazing of "preps" by college men is a long way below the standard of what college men should be and do. On the other hand, if the High school men came upon Washburn field with the intention of starting a fight, they are fully as much to blame and they have committed an irreparable wrong in placing Mr. Richards in a false position by their actions. There is not a true supporter of the college interest, or a friend of Mr. Richard, who does not deplore the affair throughout. It seems hardly conceivable that "Varsity" men would enter in a war of words or any other sort of an argument with "prep" school boys. It seems equally less true that the High school students would wage war on the college to which many of them, doubtless, intend to go. As far as I can learn, the whole affair is keenly deplored by the leaders in Colorado college, as well as in the High school.

Time and again every season in fact, the cry of rowdy ball has brought forth lament and argument in the press of the country. This year it begins earlier than usual. M. E. Cantillon, of Des Moines, John "Muggsy" McGraw of the Giants, Clarke Griffith, of the Highlanders, and others are the offenders. All of them are old-timers, but probably the cry of McGraw is the most frabacle thing of the year. The umpires are against him, the president of the league is against him, the fans are down on him and the National commission is laying for him, he declares. Such is the usual backbone of the rowdy ball player. Why are such men allowed to continue in the game? Aggressiveness is a good thing, but rowdyism is not aggressiveness and does not do the game good. The blacklist for the confirmed rowdy, whatever his connections, is the only remedy.

Lincoln has been making a great play in the Western league for first division honors and it seems that they may get there. Denver has not done so well. The team has fallen off in hitting and fielding and appears to be in for a long losing slump. The other teams in the league are going at a good gait with the exception of Pueblo and the race promises within a few weeks to settle down to one of the hardest fights in the baseball world.

Another daily fiasco has been perpetrated upon the blessed public. Fell, a pugilist of Los Angeles, [illegible] like a [illegible] in a dusty road. And the thickness of the kick is the limit. Herrera was mostly afraid to meet the Battler or else some deep-laid plan. That is the only view of the outsider at present was framed up.

Again they are launched in the American league. Cleveland, New York, the Athletics and Detroit are going out after that pennant in a way that will make a race equal to any that the league has yet had. Boston finally won again. I do not believe that Collins' men are destined to continue the losing streak that has astonished the fans of the country for the past few weeks. The team is too good and when its pitchers get to working again and some slight strength is added Boston will be a hard proposition to take liberties with, though they can hardly do much in the way of climbing for some weeks to come.

There has not been a race in the National that has held the interest of the public so well in years. New York is not running away and is meeting with hard times in the west. Chicago is more than holding its own and the Pirates seem to have recovered from that losing streak which they had a couple of weeks back. St. Louis, the much-touted hustlers for the place near the bottom, is even waking up and doing things.

Jerome Travers won the Metropolitan golf tournament yesterday from Byers of Pittsburg. The result was not a particular surprise though the defeat of Travis by Byers was.

Cutler academy won from the High school in their second game of the season for the southern championship. It was an exciting game, but I must say that it was a long way from good baseball. Hutchison of Cutler again proved that he has the right to the title of one of the hardest hitting preparatory men in this part of the country. Both teams were ragged and the game belonged to almost anybody from the start. Graham is a good pitcher, but High school is hitting harder as a team than Cutler. I still maintain, however, that with both teams playing at their top speed, Cutler will have a shade the best of the argument.

LOSES FORTUNE TO MARRY GIRL

FARMER BOY, LEFT UNEXPECTEDLY RICH, IS WILLING TO LET MILLIONS SLIP FOR LOVE

PORTAGE, Wis., May 26.—Coal Raymond, a lad of 21 years of age, laboring on a farm near Fall River, finds himself heir to $10,000,000 and a chance of coming into immediate possession of the entire amount or forfeiting four-fifths of the fortune in order to marry the girl of his choice.

Young Fuller was left the money by a bachelor uncle, Coral De Raymond, who died recently in Paris. He is sole heir to this fortune, but there is a condition in the will which cannot be lightly disregarded. Should the young man marry before he is 26 years old he must forfeit four-fifths of the estate and his share will not be paid him until five years after his wedding.

Fuller is betrothed to ... Tilden of Detroit and the wedding day was set for early fall. The boy says little beyond confirming the story of his good fortune, but it is pretty well understood that he will take his bride and one-fifth of the estate.

LEAVES HIS SEA FORT

Rich Bail Jumper Again Fools Officers of the Law.

YORK HARBOR, Me., May 26.—After defying for two days from the deck of his motor yacht Haidie New York deputies seeking his arrest upon the charge of fraud, Ralph K. Leavitt, auto broker, last night under cover of the darkness slipped ashore in a rowboat and escaped the cordon of officials.

Arrangements had been made by the deputies to charter a tug at Portsmouth today and open fire upon the Haidie if Leavitt again offered resistance.

It is believed the broker, through his servants on shore, seized a carriage and was driven to a nearby railroad station, from which he secured a train for a distant part of the country before the deputies were even aware that he had slipped away.

The night was an unusually dark one and it was not possible to see five yards upon the water. The conformation of the harbor is such that Leavitt could have landed from his yacht on any one of these different banks and still be in a direct line to a station.

His engineer, Ernest Nyland, came ashore early this morning and calmly announced that his employer was no longer upon the yacht. He refused to answer any question beyond admitting that Leavitt had gone ashore in a boat during the night. He professed to be ignorant of his plans.

"NOBLEMAN" FORGIVEN ON PROMISE TO BE GOOD

NEW YORK, May 26.—It was embarrassing to Baroness Marie De Galowitz when her husband in fits of anger tied knots in her corset strings, but she submitted to it because she considered him a man of strong artistic temperament. When, however, the baron took her across his knee and spanked her with the flat of his hand she rebelled and had him arrested. She told ... the ... romance ... in the Harlem ... court.

The magistrate said he would hold the baron under a $500 bond to behave himself for six months. As he was about to be taken back to a cell in default of bail the baroness became remorseful.

"If he'll be a good boy I'll take him back," she said.

The baron stepped ... with a ... gesture ... exclaimed rapturously: "My dear baroness, I'll reverence it again."

"Dismissed," said the judge.

MISS ETHEL BARRYMORE TO RETIRE FROM STAGE

NEW YORK, May 26.—It is announced today that Ethel Barrymore is to retire from the stage. Thus the expected happens. Miss Barrymore has not been in good health the entire winter and had to leave the theater more than a month ago.

But the cause of her permanent retirement from the boards is not a matter of health. She is to marry this summer a devoted young Englishman of good family and a captain in the army, to whom she has been engaged for the last twelve months. It is thought the wedding will be in the latter part of next month.

SLAP ON FACE COSTS A SOCIETY WOMAN $500

ST. LOUIS, May 26.—It cost the society woman, Mrs. Henry Nathanson, just $500 damages to slap a waitress, Miss Helen Inman, in the face in the dining room of the Fielding hotel. It took the jury just forty-five minutes to arrive at a verdict in Judge McDonald's court.

Mrs. Nathanson admitted on the stand that she had slapped the waitress, but gave many incidents that she thought excused her for the administering of the blow. Miss Inman had sued for $3,000 damages.

THE MILLIONAIRES OF THE UNITED STATES SENATE

of Mal... credited with ... the ... made ... daughter of Zach Chandler of Michigan, the Mark Hanna of his day. Senator Hale has ... dependent, however, upon his wife's money, for he is a shrewd business man and has made investments which have doubled his fortune. Probably $3,000,000 is a low estimate of his holdings. He has never exercised fully his ability to make money, having given all his time practically to public business.

Honorable Fame Their Reward

A hasty review of the millionaires of the senate reveals the fact that ... taking ... the chief end and aim of their lives. They use their great talents in the public service and gifts which would yield their possessors immense wealth are hired by the government for $5,000 a year. The honorable fame that accompanies public service conscientiously performed is the reward of these men in the main and ... there are a few rich men in the senate who got there solely because they are rich, they do not deceive anybody. They find their level and in due time pass out with no credit except that which attaches to honest and patriotic service.

It is only fair to say that most of these men struggle under the handicap of riches to serve their countrymen. They cannot succeed as well as men who have refrained from the temptation of piling up wealth, but they perceive at last that if they are to win honor instead of ignominy by a seat in the senate they must work for the public welfare. Thus the sordid ambition of some millionaires to sit in the senate merely because they regard it as a millionaires club is turned into worthy emulation of really great and patriotic men and talents that have been squandered in money grabbing are devoted to better things.

All contributions intended for the social department of the Sunday Gazette should reach the editor, Mrs. Ella Celeste Adams, 809 East Boulder street, telephone 485-a, or Gazette editorial rooms, telephone 85, not later than Friday afternoon.

AS THERE has been such a dearth of society functions of a large and formal description, the May party to be given Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Colorado Springs Musical club is particularly welcome. Careful plans have been made for the pleasure of the several hundred dancers who will gather in the beautiful Antlers ball room at 9 o'clock and occupy the floor until 1.

Especially beautiful floral decorations and excellent music will leave nothing to be desired. For those who do not dance, card tables will be provided, so one's favorite game may be enjoyed, and a buffet supper will be served at 11 o'clock.

Receiving will be the committee of arrangements, Mrs. Fred Crabtree, president of the Musical club; Mrs. John Eaton Tucker, Mrs. Philip B. Stewart, Mrs. J. Dawson Hawkins, Mrs. Edgar M. Marbourg, Mrs. George B. Tripp. The following are patronesses of the party:

Mrs. Benjamin C. Allen, Mrs. [illegible] Bell, P. Anderson, Mrs. Sherwood Aldrich, Mrs. Chester Alan Arthur, Mrs. Charles A. Baldwin, Mrs. Franklin Bartlett, Mrs. Jason N. Bemis, Mrs. Irving W. Bonbright, Mrs. George [illegible] Buckman, Mrs. Florian Cajori, Mrs. Lowell W. Chisholm, Mrs. Leonard [illegible], Mrs. Theodore F. Dewitt, Mrs. [illegible] P. Dodge, Miss Sarah Dorsey, Mrs. Harry Fuller, Mrs. M. Clement Fike, Mrs. Frank Gilpin, Mrs. [illegible] C. Grinnell, Mrs. Joseph Harrison, Mrs. [illegible] C. Hemming, Mrs. George C. [illegible], Mrs. Henry Hine, Mrs. Irving Howbert, Mrs. W. H. Leonard, Mrs. A. B. Littlefield, Mrs. J. A. Lockhart, Mrs. Horace G. Lunt, Mrs. Gilbert McClurg, Miss Palmer, Mrs. Theodore E. Quinby, Mrs. Frederick E. Robinson, Mrs. Harry H. Seldomridge, Mrs. John G. Shields, Mrs. William F. Slocum, Mrs. S. A. Swenson, Mrs. William C. Turgis, Mrs. Frederick M. P. Taylor, Mrs. Thomas K. Urdahl, Mrs. Edmund C. Van Diest.

The May party will certainly be the most fashionable function of the season, and on that occasion will be seen some of the beautiful gowns for which Colorado Springs ladies are noted. Previous to the party, in several of the North end homes dinner parties will be given. Among the hostesses will be Mrs. W. H. Leonard and Mrs. Chester Alan Arthur.

The Social Board

The final toast luncheon of a series which has been given this year by the members of the art and literature department of the Woman's club took place on Wednesday, in G. A. R. hall. Although the thunder showers necessitated a sudden change of place of meeting, Stratton park having been in the original plan, the happiness of the club women was just as great and even the sudden indisposition of the toastmaster, Miss Mabelle Carter, was philosophically borne.

At 12:30 o'clock nearly eighty were seated at the tables, decorated with white fleurs-de-lis, and partook of the delicious viands provided. The chairman of the department, Mrs. E. A. Sawyer, substituted as toastmaster in her most felicitous style.

The list of toasts arranged was as follows: "Picnics," Miss Whitehead; "Early Rising," Mrs. J. R. Watt; "Personality of the Mountains," Mrs. J. H. Hillhouse; "The American Girl," Mrs. J. A. Orr; "Ideals," Mrs. C. D. Robinson; "Roosevelt," Mrs. A. L. Mowry; "[illegible]nants," Mrs. Wolf; "Our Best Girl," Mrs. G. W. Mumaw; "Pike's Peak Centennial," Mrs. G. N. White.

Among others on the list of hostesses were Mrs. Henry Sachs, Mrs. Philip B. Stewart, Mrs. Frank E. Johnson, Mrs. Wallace F. Brown, Mrs. H. H. Seldomridge, Mrs. Lot Warren, Mrs. William [illegible]mson, Mrs. Edgar W. Work, Mrs. J. H. White responded to the last toast, the subject of which had been kept secret. A continuous wave of applause swept throughout the hall when it was known that the toast was a tribute to the originator of the toast luncheons—Mrs. Sawyer.

While deeply moved by the appreciation expressed, Mrs. Sawyer, whose readiness of repartee is proverbial, was at her best and returned the compliment by telling her auditors that it was owing to their kind co-operation that she had been enabled to realize her ideal. She invited the club women to join with her in a crusade for punctuality, and it was resolved to start a pledge at once. It was the sentiment of the club women that Mrs. Sawyer has exemplified this saying of Dr. Edward Everett Hale, "He who wishes to lead must learn to lift."

Miss Jessie Morse, one of the June brides, was the honor guest yesterday afternoon, when Miss Florence Pinckney entertained the Sigia club at her home on North Weber street. The entire house was elaborately decorated in red and white hearts and the heart device and the colors were exquisitly perpetuated in the ices, cakes and confections.

When Miss Morse pulled the ribbons attached to a floral bell suspended from the electrolier in the parlor she was showered with a quantity of pretty handkerchiefs. Those participating were Miss Grace Campbell, Miss Cora Wilcox, Miss Stella Wilcox, Miss Rue McKinnie, Miss Mabel Matthews, Miss Marie Gashwiler, Miss Mary Strachan, Miss Vina Campbell, Miss Helen Carruthers, Miss Sadie Vaux, Miss Jeanette Scholz, Miss Jennie Pinckney, Mrs. Willis Strachan, Mrs. Mel S. Wright.

In compliment to Miss Dell Heizer, Mrs. J. Dawson Hawkins entertained at luncheon Wednesday. The other guests were Mrs. Charles Edward Heizer, Mrs. Alfred H. Hunt, Mrs. Francis D. Pastorius, Miss Frances Heizer, Miss May Kyle and Miss Foster Dickerman.

Miss Innes of North Cascade avenue entertained a number of ladies and gentlemen at 5 o'clock on Wednesday, to meet Miss Peters of New York city.

Mrs. S. A. Swenson was hostess Tuesday afternoon of a tea served at the Cheyenne Mountain club in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Dominic, the parents of Mrs. Alexander Smith.

Miss Dell Heizer and Mr. Willis Armstrong were the guests of honor at a dinner party given Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. Pastorius, 712 North Cascade avenue. Covers were laid for twenty-four. The floral decorations were of purple Japanese iris and asparagus plumosa.

Dr. and Mrs. P. F. Gildea had as dinner guests on Wednesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Quinby, Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Kent and Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Chisholm.

Mrs. Edgar M. Marbourg entertained informally at luncheon on Friday at her home on North Cascade avenue.

Mrs. Robert E. Lewis entertained informally at luncheon yesterday noon. The table was prettily garnitured with spring flowers.

In compliment to Mrs. Green and Miss Green of Dallas, Texas, Mrs. A. D. Airheart entertained a party of ladies at luncheon on Monday afternoon in her home, 1614 Wood avenue.

Wednesday evening, Mrs. Henry Dwinell entertained informally at dinner in honor of Miss Jessie Morse. The other guests were Miss Sadie Vaux and Miss Helen Carruthers.

On Friday, Miss Louie Nichols, 705 North Nevada avenue, entertained at a dainty buffet luncheon in compliment to Miss Louise S. Cox. The guests numbered twenty. The decorations were in red and white carried out with hearts and roses. Miss Cox was surprised with a linen shower.

Miss Jessie Piper, of Clinton, Mo., and Miss Pauline Walbrach, of Denver, were the guests of honor last Monday at a charming luncheon given by Mrs. H. F. Avery, of North Tejon street. May flowers artistically adorned the table.

The other guests were Mrs. Daniel Thatcher, Mrs. Lula Bernard, Mrs. Ermin D. Marr, Mrs. Clarence E. Titus, Miss Harriet Johnson, Mrs. Charles T. Wilder, Mrs. William C. Jones, Mrs. J. B. Colt, Mrs. Walter Barlow and Miss Maud Goudy.

Engaged—Married

The marriage of Miss Hyacinthe Mary, youngest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William A. Bell of Briarhurst, Manitou, to Viscount Kelbourne, is announced for Tuesday, May 29, at Pendell Court, Bletchingley, Surrey, the beautiful family country seat in England. The ceremony will be performed in St. Mary's church and all the appointments will be of the most elaborate description.

Viscount Kelburne was born June 15, 1874, and is at present an officer in the royal navy. While it was known that the wedding would take place in the early spring, the date was somewhat uncertain, owing to the fact that the viscount was serving with his majesty's battleship "Renown," which escorted the Prince and Princess of Wales on their trip to India. The countess-to-be was born at Briarhurst, on April 20, 1881. Her eldest sister, Mrs. H. V. Pearce is a resident of Denver, and her second sister, Margaret, is now Lady Montagu Pollock, having married Sir M. F. Montagu Pollock, baronet, shortly after he recovered his health through a sojourn in Colorado Springs. The future home of the viscount will be at Kelburne castle, on the west shore in Ayrshire, one of the most beautifully situated estates in the British isles.

The marriage of Miss Dell Heizer and Mr. Willis Robert Armstrong will be quietly celebrated on Tuesday afternoon, next at 5:30 o'clock in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David N. Heizer, 1432 Wood avenue, the Rev. Edgar W. Work, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church officating.

Miss Frances Heizer, sister of the bride, will be the maid of honor and Mr. William Francis Richards, best man. Only near relatives and friends will be present. Among them will be Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Heizer, of Deadwood, S. D.; Mrs. Heff, of Philadelphia, and Miss Purdy, of Chicago.

Miss Jessie Beatrice Lennox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lennox, will be united in marriage to Lieutenant William Garland Fay, of the U. S. Marine corps, on the evening of Wednesday, June 6, at 6:30 o'clock in the Lennox residence, 1001 North Nevada avenue, the Rev. C. B. Wilcox, D. D., pastor of the First Methodist church, officiating. Miss McNaughton of Appleton, Wis., will be the maid of honor and Mr. Loring Lennox, the brother of the bride, best man.

Only a small number of relatives and friends will be in attendance. Lieutenant Fay arrives from Annapolis, Md., tomorrow.

Mrs. Harvey Young has issued invitations to the marriage of her daughter, Gwendolen Marion, to Mr. Robert Livermore, on Wednesday, June 6, at high noon in St. Stephen's church.

Miss Marion Elvira Jones, of Sedalia, Mo., will become the bride of the Rev. J. B. Hunley, pastor of the Christian church of Canon City, Colorado, on June 28.

Miss Jones is a relative of Judge Allen T. Gunnell and family, of this city, and during her frequent visits at their home has won many friends. She is a talented vocalist and has often charmed audiences with her voice, as she has appeared on the concert stage in Denver and Colorado Springs.

For some years Miss Jones was an associate member of the Royal Academy of Music of London, and she is a member of the board of managers of the Sedalia college of music.

Mr. Hunley has been pastor of the Canon City church for about eight months. He is a native of Virginia and graduated from the theological department of the University of Kentucky, at Lexington.

Invitations have been received in this city to the marriage ceremony of Miss Artie Beatrice Calvin, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Frank N. Calvin, of St. Louis, Mo., former pastor of the First Christian church of Colorado Springs. The groom-to-be is Dr. Arthur J. Clay, a rising young St. Louis physician. The wedding will take place Tuesday, June 5, in the Compton Heights church, St. Louis. Miss Calvin and her sister, Miss Enola Calvin, are musicians of unusual promise, and have spent considerable time studying in Europe.

The wedding of Miss Jessie Morse and Mr. Carl Plumb will take place on Wednesday, June 20 at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ira J. Morse, 1504 North Nevada avenue. The groom graduates this week from the Denver-Gross Medical college in Denver.

The marriage of Miss Zaidie Zinn and Mr. Richard McKinnie Aitken will take place on Wednesday, June 27 at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, at the residence of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Aitken, 508 North Weber street.

Although the engagement of Miss Priscilla Sater and Mr. Stephen L. Goodale was announced some time ago, there were but few who were aware that the marriage date had been set until after the ceremony was performed. President William F. Slocum officiated at the marriage of Miss Sater and Mr. Goodale Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in the Slocum residence on College place, a small circle of friends being witnesses.

Mr. Goodale is a nephew of President and Mrs. Slocum and is a graduate of Colorado college and the State School of Mines. Mrs. Goodale is also a graduate of Colorado college and has been connected with the treasurer's office of the institution since her graduation.

Mr. Goodale has recently accepted a position with the Annie Laurie mine at Kimberly, Utah, and their home will be at that place. No cards have been issued, but Mrs. Goodale will be at home to her friends Thursday afternoons from 4 until 6 o'clock, at 24 College place, until after the middle of June.

Miss Katherine C. MacMillan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth M. MacMillan, and Mr. Lester A. Eyler will be married Monday morning, June 4, in the First Presbyterian church by the Rev. Edgar W. Work, D. D. Miss Metta Smart will be the maid of honor, and Mr. H. W. Anderson, best man. After a wedding breakfast served at the residence of the bride's parents, 9 South Eaton street, the young couple will leave on a trip to the Pacific coast.

One of the most elaborate of home weddings was that of Miss May Blair Rafield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Rafield, 1130 North Tejon street, and Mr. Alfred S. Kraker, which took place Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, Rabbi Witt of Pueblo officiating, according to the impressive rites of the Jewish church.

The floral decorations were beautiful. All was white and green in the parlor and the bridal party was grouped before an arch of bride's roses, smilax and asparagus plumosa, from which hung a floral wedding bell. The mantel was banked with white roses and the electroliers wound with asparagus plumosa.

An exquisite toilet of white Brussels net and valenciennes lace over chiffon and silk, empirecase, was worn by the bride. Her filmy veil of tulle was caught with lilies of the valley, and her shower boquet of bride's roses, lilies of the valley and maidenhair ferns was tied with tulle.

The maid of honor, Miss Ethel Rafield, and the bridesmaid, Miss Berenice Hacharach, sister and cousin of the bride, wore white china silk and cluny lace and carried shower bouquets of marguerites tied with green tulle. Little Carolyn Lorig, in white Paris lawn, carried the wedding ring in the heart of a calla lily. Mr. Charles Rafield, a brother of the bride, was the best man.

The library was decorated with quantities of lilacs and tall tropical plants formed a bower within which a stringed orchestra furnished enjoyable selections throughout the evening. The dining room was in pink and white and the flowers used were peonies, principally.

Seventy or more guests called between 7 and 8 o'clock to tender their congratulations to the popular young couple. A sumptuous buffet luncheon was served and later a wedding supper for the bridal party and out-of-town guests, numbering in all about thirty.

Many gifts of great beauty and value were received. Mr. and Mrs. Kraker have gone on an extended eastern trip which includes a visit to the relatives of the groom residing at Richmond, Va.

Invitations have been issued to the wedding of Miss Orra L. Cooper and Mr. Henry W. Milton, which will take place at the home of the bride's parents in Roswell the evening of Tuesday, June 5, at 8:30 o'clock. Only immediate relatives and friends will be in attendance.

News has been received of the recent marriage of Miss Helen E. Smith to Mr. Jean B. Chauvenet in Los Angeles, Cal. The ceremony was performed at the parsonage of the Unity Presbyterian church, the Rev. W. W. Logan officiating. A unique feature was the rendering of a wedding march composed by the groom, who is one of Los Angeles' prominent musicians. The bride was a successful kindergartner in this city for some time and left for the coast about two years ago. Many friends are interested in the marriage announcement.

Miss Nora Alvira Booth and Mr. Charles Leon Binkert were married last Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Booth, 419 West Kiowa street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. O. Walker, pastor of the Central Christian church at Loveland, Colorado, a friend of the family.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white chiffon over taffeta, garnitured with a yoke and sleeves of all-over lace, and her bouquet was composed of bride's roses. Miss Ruth Valentine Moore, of Pueblo, the maid of honor, wore pink chiffon and carried pink roses. The bride's brother, Mr. Robert Booth, was best man.

The house was decorated with lilacs and marguerites, and the bridal party stood beneath a floral arch. Miss Ethyl Hayden rendered the wedding march.

Mrs. Booth served refreshments, assisted by Mrs. James Stires, Mrs. Knight and Mrs. Mary Booth. Mr. and Mrs. Binkert have taken possession of their future home, 230 Franklin street, which was in readiness for their occupancy.

Formal and Informal

Although much fatigued, the promoters of the entertainment in aid of the parish house fund of Grace Episcopal church are jubilant. The Opera house held large audiences both Friday evening and yesterday afternoon, and the profits will be considerable. Rarely has there been more variety offered as to program and so many good specialties. Miss Moorman, the director, is to be congratulated upon the successful outcome of her efforts and the fine co-operation of all participating.

The curtain arose on the beautiful spectacular flower scene and a murmur of admiration was heard throughout the house as the fairies, Marguerite and Juanita Cowan, introduced the flower groups. While all deserve favorable mention, the "Welcome to June," by tiny maidens representing roses, was particularly good, and the "Quarrel of the Buttercups" was full of mirthfulness.

In the second part, "The Happy Little Japs," and "The Revel of the Snowballs," made a great hit. The graceful evolutions were quite intricate, yet executed with a precision that was delightful to see. Little Claribel Campbell and Edith Miller were inimitable in the rendition of the song, "The Girl You Love." Claribel also brought credit to herself in "Star Babies," from "Babes in the Woods." Edith's fairy dance was also a pretty number.

The sketches of Mr. Tom Robinson added much to the variety, as did the humorous songs of Messrs. Fink and Wiswall. The "Sunflower" dance by Mr. Walter Ashby was one of the most amusing numbers upon the program.

Then, the finale, Jerome K. Jerome's lively little play, "When Greek Meets Greek," was given in addled style. From beginning to end, there was not a dull moment, whether the flirts, "Bowie Winningham" (Miss Nellie Painter), and "Tom Ackland" (Mr. W. F. Richards) occupied the center of the stage or shared it with "Mr. Schofield" (Mr. Walter Ashby) and his daughter-in-law, "Mrs. Schofield (Miss Jessie Oakes.)

As Sunday, May 20, was the anniversary of the birth of Mrs. James M. Ellison, a number of her friends planned a surprise visit to her home on Monday afternoon. All was admirably carried out and Mrs. Ellison greatly appreciated the good will manifested and the dainty souvenir gifts. Delicious refreshments were served about five o'clock and later those participating departed wishing the hostess many happy returns of the day.

In the party were Mrs. Ellison, Mrs. Robbins, Mrs. Dwinell, Mrs. Wilbur, Mrs. N. S. Gandy, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Gard, Mrs. Reyer, Mrs. Marion Stark, Mrs. Fehleson, Mrs. E. E. Raty, Mrs. William Clark, Mrs. F. L. Gutmann, Mrs. J. H. Gardner, Mrs. C. F. Ormsby, Mesdames Baldwin, Stephens, and McNider of Colorado City; Mrs. C. A. Pollen and Mrs. H. H. Grafton of Manitou.

Mrs. Mort Parsons, 1928 North Tejon street, gave a delightful thimble party Thursday afternoon, the guest of honor being Mrs. Matt France. The house was prettily decorated with lilacs and bridal wreath. Many of the guests were pioneer friends of Mrs. France and among them were Mrs. H. Hoyt Stevens, Mrs. William H. Bacon, Mrs. E. E. McGovney, Mrs. E. J. Eaton, Mrs. G. S. Barnes, Mrs. J. P. Barnes, Mrs. Gard, Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Meservey, Mrs. A. B. Meservey, Mrs. F. L. Rosabach, Mrs. J. H. Franklin, Miss Samson, Miss Eaton, Miss Lizzie Baker, Mrs. E. D. Baker, Mrs. N. S. Gandy, Mrs. Seth Baker, Mrs. R. Thrall, Mrs. A. H. Antoine.

The members of the senior class of Colorado college were entertained by President and Mrs. Slocum Tuesday evening, at their home, 24 College place. The class colors were used in decorating and refreshments were served.

The chorus of a thousand voices for the Pike's Peak Centennial celebration is now assured. Dr. Woolsey is training a large chorus composed of young people of the city, assisted by many of the church choirs. This chorus, numbering one hundred persons, will sing at the state Christian Endeavor convention in this city, June 14-17, and will form the nucleus of the Pike's Peak Centennial chorus. Rehearsals are being held every Friday night at the First Congregational church.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Kenyon entertained Wednesday evening at a charmingly arranged chafing dish supper at their home on East Espanola street. Seated at the table were Mr. and Mrs. Floyd B. Healey, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Barney, Mr. and Mrs. Smith Barnes and Mr. and Mrs. Kenyon.

Grace church was well filled Tuesday evening with music-loving people when Mr. Clarence D. Sears gave an organ recital. Some of the particularly enjoyable numbers were the violin solos by Mrs. Robert Briscoe, the duet from "The Holy City," by Miss Mary Lawton and Miss Margaret Johnson, and Master Nelson Bratt's solo from "The Seven Last Words." Mr. Sears will give another recital in about two weeks.

Mrs. Albert May, 2008 North Tejon street, entertained section 4 of the Ladies' Aid society of the First Methodist church Friday afternoon.

The social given by the Altar Boys' club of St. Mary's Catholic church, for the benefit of the church fund, was an enjoyable affair. A large audience filled St. Mary's hall and enjoyed the program which included the following numbers: Duet, Ethel Boland and Leah Meeker; vocal solo, Marie Clough; piano solo, Ella McCaffery; recitation, Katherine Cullen; piano solo, Ellen McCaffery; vocal solo, Beatrice Rudawsky; piano solo, Addie Carr; medley, Clarence Gillis; vocal solo, Gladys Haas; piano solo, Ethel Boland; duet, Marguerite and Juanita Cowan; recitation, A. Little Princess Louise, the only daughter of the German emperor, is a tall child with a pale face and very golden curls. She is almost invariably dressed in white, and being the only girl she has a thoroughly good time, her brothers all adoring her, and her imperial father giving in to her every mandate. It appears that one of her wishes lately cost the emperor the sum of 3,000 marks a year for the education of a marvelous musical prodigy of six years of age. The German empress plays beautifully, but her little daughter shows no great inclination to follow in her footsteps, very much disliking the daily drudgery of practise. She was very indignant recently on being told by her father that he had heard a little boy violinist who played even better than her mother. As a proof the little Spanish prodigy was brought to the palace, where he astonished everyone, including the little princess, who would not let him go until she had wheedled the promise of the money for his education out of her indulgent parent, who finds that to talk of talent prodigies to his daughter is an expensive thing.

A STORY FOR GIRLS

SEFFY

Seffy by John Luther Long. The Bobbs-Merrill Company publishers, Indianapolis. Price $1 50 net

Mr Long has written a charming sweet love story, and he has most fittingly dedicated his book "To all who have courted for remembrance to all who will court—for example [illegible] have never courted—in pity to all who will never court—with tears." The sub-title of the book describes it as "a little comedy of country manners and [illegible] with gleamings of passion and even tragedy now and then.

Seffy is an inordinately shy youth gentle in his manners with a reverent love for his dead mother and a great respect for his father Baumgartner. The plot in a few words is the old situation of a lover who lacks boldness, a girl who despises his timidity, a more daring lover who wins because of the angry girl's desire to "spite" the lad for whom she really cares. Illustrations by C. D. Williams are printed in colors and page borders of clover and wheat designs in lavender making it one of those pretty love-story gift books that are so much in demand.

Any story to which the name of George Barr McCutcheon is attached is always entertaining. His latest book, "Cowardice Court," possesses an original charm and daintiness of fancy which is irresistibly fetching. The volume is beautifully bound and contains four striking full-page illustrations in color by Harrison Fisher. Theodore B Hapgood has furnished the marginal illustrations which decorate every page

"THE GLORY SEEKERS."

"The Glory Seekers" by William Horace Brown. A. C. McClurg & Company publishers Chicago. Price $1 50 net

This is the romance of would-be founders of empire in the early days of the southwest. Mr Brown's true stories are more exciting and interesting than most of the novels of adventure now being published. This is a case where truth is stranger than fiction and it is safe to say that few of us nowadays realize what a wealth of romance is to be found in the history of the old south-west.

"Money" the play to be given by the senior class of Colorado college, is one of the best comedies written during the last century

It portrays the greed for money and the homage that the so-called higher classes in England pay to those who have the money

The plot is that of a young man poor but well educated suddenly becoming rich, whereupon all flock round him and endeavor to secure part of his wealth

By a clever scheme he outwits them, pretending to lose his money, thus finding out his true friends, and the play ends, making all more or less happy

It is full of strong situations and a pleasant humor which though a trifle old-fashioned is yet amusing

The senior class this year has an unusual amount of good talent and under the directorship of Mrs William Barber the play promises to be one of the best ever given on the college stage, rivaling "Trelawney of the Wells," given by the class of 1904.

OFFICIAL AMENITIES

Senator Dolliver wandered into the supreme court room the other day as a diversion from the perplexing task of following the recent debate unceasingly for three months. Justice Harlan happened to note his presence and soon a page brought a note to the senator. "I am glad to see you here," it read. "You should come often to learn what the law really is." "I am glad to be here," wrote the senator in a note which the page carried back. "But I am not as happy here as I should be because there are so many dissenting opinions," it said. "By the way I observe that the senate has made Knox a committee to find out what Brewer meant in his Michigan case. Brewer is from your circuit."

"For the excellent character of the designs; the execution of the work in the delicate and artistic shading, shown in figure and landscape, the expression of faces and attitudes, produced with the accuracy of the artist's brush; the perspective observed the wonderful fidelity of detail in the reproduction of dress. The flesh tints in the faces and the light in the eyes, the hair and the features are so skillfully depicted as to warrant the belief that it is the work of the brush and not of the needle. The high quality of the work merits the most unreserved praise; the advance made in applying to artistic creations what was first intended simply for the useful, marks an Era in the World's Progress as well as in the development of the Sewing Machine." "The advance in this regard in these machine tapestries is [illegible] notable and gratifying, creating a new industry that [illegible] claimed as distinctively American and reviving a classic art [illegible] decoration formerly restricted to the few, but now available to the many."

Seven Years of Terrible Disaster

Since the Beginning of the Century Scores of Great Calamities Have Fallen on Land and Sea—The United States Seems to Have Gotten More Than Its Fair Share, Leading Cities Suffering Heavily, Among the Number Have Been New York, Chicago, Baltimore, Galveston, Paterson, New Orleans, and Jacksonville, Fla.—Disasters That Have Overtaken Our Navy: War Has Been Waged Somewhere Ever Since the Century Began—The Victims of Volcanic Eruptions and Earthquakes Are to Be Numbered by the Tens of Thousands, Famine Has Stalked in Four Countries; Great Men Assassinated; Explosions on and Under the Earth—But Invariably Renewed Faith in Humanity Has Sprung Up After Every Seemingly Overwhelming Calamity.

By H. E. CLAYTON.

IS THE twentieth to be a century of terrible disasters? It is only in its sixth year, and yet scores of dire calamities have befallen the human race on land and sea. Volcanoes, earthquakes, tidal waves, storms, hurricanes, typhoons and tornadoes, explosions, massacres, strikes, panics, famine, railway accidents, assassination, riots and never-ceasing war—every natural agency and man himself have combined to make disaster follow close on the heels of disaster through the five years that are gone and the one just nearing its prime.

Grouping the troubles in Russia as one, seven disasters that have attracted world-wide attention have occurred in the five months just ending. This is the list—the San Francisco earthquake and fire, the Vesuvius eruption, probably the most disastrous since the one that buried Pompeii; the French mine horror, the sinking of the steamer Valencia off Puget sound, the famine in Japan and the explosion on the United States' battleship Kearsarge.

Setting down the series of disasters that is known as the Russo-Japanese war as one, treating every war as one disaster simply, and all of Russia's internal disorders, from the beginning of the century, as one long drawn out disaster, about 100 disasters, more or less terrible, have held the eye of the reading public from time to time since the new century was ushered in with all sorts of merry-making. In addition to these there have been other scores of disasters that, because of the remoteness from the occident, or lack of unusual features, have attracted little or no attention.

A glance over the list shows that this country seems to have come in for more than its fair share of the disasters. Beginning with the coal-mine explosion at Red Ash, West Virginia, which 100 lives were lost, and ending with the destruction of San Francisco, at least two score of notable disasters have afflicted us. Of this number fourteen have been disasters of magnitude to our cities—tornado and tidal wave at Galveston—though this occurred in September, 1900, and does not properly belong in the present century—yellow fever at New Orleans, first fire and then flood at Paterson, destructive fires at Baltimore, Jacksonville, Hoboken, Little Rock, Waterbury, Conn.; Rochester, N. Y.; the Iroquois fire in Chicago; the General Slocum fire in New York, death-dealing heat in the summer of 1901, in all our eastern cities, and earthquake and fire in San Francisco. The god of disaster seems to have taken demoniacal delight in laying his blighting hand on our centers of population.

No one can say for a certainty how many lives and how much wealth have been lost to the world by reason of these five score disasters. Yet we know of hundreds of thousands of human beings killed in one way or another, of hundreds of millions of property destroyed in one way or another. Only the blackest pessimist would care to delve far enough to secure the exact figures, if such were possible.

Volcanic Eruptions; Earthquakes.

Volcanoes and earthquakes have been exceedingly active natural agents of the god of disaster.

Greatest of volcanic eruptions in loss of life was that of Pelee, on May 8, 1902, destroying the city of St. Pierre and thirty thousand lives. The day before La Soufriere, St. Vincent, claimed two thousand victims, and nearly three days after its first eruption Pelee again breathed forth death and destruction, this time robbing three thousand souls of the breath of life.

About the time of Pelee's first eruption, the Guatemalan city of Quezaltenango was thrown down by an earthquake and nearly three thousand of its inoffensive residents clashed beneath the ruins of their houses. Yet, great as was this disaster, the world took little note of it, so much greater was the disaster at the foot of Pelee. In October of the same year the volcano Santa Maria, Guatemala devastated a large district, taking many lives.

The year previous a volcano in Kyoto, Japan, numbered its victims by the thousands. The Asia Minor earthquake of 1903 destroyed scores of towns and four thousand lives. More or less disastrous earthquakes have afflicted upper South America at intervals during the seven years; and there are the Indian and Calabrian quakes of last spring and autumn, taking thousand spring and autumn taking thousands of lives, to say nothing of the quake that brought death and destruction to various parts of Macedonia in 1902 Salonica, in particular, suffering heavily.

Hundreds—nay, thousands, of defenceless persons have been put to the Turkish sword in Macedonia. In the district of Florina and Monastir the Turks massacred the women and children of twenty-two villages. The first Kishineff massacre made the Gentile world gasp with horror, and the second Kishineff and the Odessa and other massacres of Jews have not caused the horror to abate. Literally tens of thousands of persons have been massacred in cold blood since the dawn of the enlightened and much heralded twentieth century.

This is exclusive of the Chinese horde that fell before the swords of the three Russian armies that overran Manchuria at the time of the Boxer trouble. Some hold that Russia then massacred instead of fought, and they point to the Amur river filled with yellow corpses at Blagovestchensk. But Russia called it war. At any rate, the result spelled disaster, and disaster was likewise the result of the Boxer outbreak wherever it obtained.

War Never Ceasing.

But if massacres, earthquakes and volcanoes have taken their toll of thousands, victims by the hundreds of thousands have been immolated on the altar of the god of war.

Both on land and sea, what war fought with modern weapons has been more disastrous to life and property than the Russo-Japanese conflict? The century inherited the Boer war. There was the Boxer war with its massacre of missionaries and native Christians, and the punitive armies that punished sorely. Civil war ended in Colombia late in 1902 after the country had become well-nigh exhausted from the struggle, and in the same year 3,000 dead and wounded were left by the revolutionary army on a single Venezuelan battlefield.

Our army undoubtedly slew thousands in putting down the insurrection in the Philippines. Revolution has bloodied Santo Domingo. Fighting has been going on in Ecuador. Colonel Younghusband's expedition into Tibet brought death to many an inhabitant of the world's tableland. The English have fought the Mad Mullah in Somaliland, and have in turn been attacked by the Ashantis, the sultan has lost whole regiments in quelling rebellion in Yemen Province, Arabia. Venezuela repulsed Colombian invaders, and Germany, after many months of bloody and costly fighting, has not yet subdued the black aborigines of German South Africa.

It is said, without fear of contradiction, that the disaster of war has been present on some spot of the globe ever since the century began. And a large part of the time it has been exceedingly bloody war.

Long List of Fires.

Including the San Francisco fire, there have been at least a score of conflagrations entailing great property loss or heavy loss of life. Most of them have smitten various cities either in this country or Canada.

Biggest in the amount of property destroyed San Francisco excepted, was the Baltimore fire, largest from the number of lives lost was the Iroquois fire in Chicago. In the one case $70,000,000 worth of property went up in smoke, in the other six hundred lives were taken by the smoke and flame, sheet, or the rush for the exits that followed the outbreak of the fire itself.

The Paterson fire of 1902 made ten thousand families homeless and did eight million dollars damage. In the Hoboken docks fire of two years previous not only docks and steamships and merchandise to the value of ten million dollars were destroyed, but several hundred lives were lost, as well, many of the victims dying like rats in the burning hulls of ships.

The same year nearly all of Hull, P. Q. a part of Ottawa, Canada, were carried away by the fire demon. Twelve thousand persons were made homeless, seven lost their lives, and the property loss totaled fifteen millions. A year later Montreal suffered a two and a half million dollar fire. The seven months January fire in the orphan asylum in Rochester, N. Y., took twenty-six young lives. Five months later a ten million dollar fire wiped out the business portion of Jacksonville, Fla., and three years later the business section of Rochester suffered fire damage to the extent of over three millions.

It was on April 29, 1904 that Toronto found itself in the grasp of the fire demon, and before it could be overcome the greater part of the city had been destroyed, ten million dollars in property going up in smoke. In January of the same year ten thousand persons were made homeless at Aalesund, Norway, and a year before that forty-two insane women met death in a blaze in the Colney Hatch Asylum, London.

Four years ago occurred the Atlantic City beach hotels fire, one million; the Waterbury, Conn., business section fire, two millions, and the Park Avenue Hotel holocaust, New York city, in which seventeen lives were lost by suffocation. The Little Rock, Ark., fire of last year burned up a square mile of buildings, causing a loss of $1,500,000.

Excluding the San Francisco fire, over one-half the property loss fell in 1904, while to 1903 is the unenviable record for the largest number of lives sacrificed to the flames. In eleven of these great fires the property loss totaled $134,000,000—over eleven millions more than the government's expenditures on the army during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905.

Thousands Lost in Explosions.

Despite all the safeguards thrown about the business of mining by the state and the mine owners, 2,500 miners lost their lives in just seven of the various coal mine explosions. The most disastrous of these explosions was that in France at the Courriere mines. Twelve hundred men were either killed outright by the explosion and flames or died of starvation while searching in vain through the dark shafts for a way of escape. The explosions at Schofield, Utah, 1900, Hanna, Wyo., 1903, and Cheswick, Pa., the following year, each claimed two hundred victims.

In the Red Ash, W. Va., disaster, 1900, one hundred corpses were brought out of the galleries by the rescuing parties. Somewhat over a year later news came from South Wales that in the Universal colliery eighty miners had met death. Last June 500 were killed in a mine explosion at Khartsisk, Russia.

In the explosion which wrecked Togo's flagship, after that vessel had come through the war with Russia practically unscathed, 599 of Japan's brave jackies fasted death. That was last fall and a year and a half previous to the explosion of the Japanese steamer Notarimea when she crashed in a fog against the Osaka breakwater.

Perhaps it is but natural that disaster should overtake man in his daring attempt to sail under the seas as well as over them. The British submarine boat A1, while maneuvering in the English channel was run into by a steamer and sank like a stone. The A8 sank as a result of an explosion, twenty-six, all told, being lost in both boats. When the French submarine Farfadet unexpectedly sank to the bottom of Tunis harbor strenuous attempts were made by means of grappling hooks to bring the boat to the surface in time to save its crew, but all in vain, and thirteen officers and men gave their lives to their country. Last year, also, the Russian submarine Delfin sank at her moorings with her crew of twenty-one.

When the torpedo boat Cobra buckled and sank off Lincolnshire seventy-seven fighters were lost to the British navy. That was in September of 1901. And then there is a long series of disasters to the Russian navy, beginning with Togo's surprise attack on the Port Arthur fleet and ending with his wiping out of Rojestvensky's fleet in the sea of Japan, sixteen months later.

Railroad Wrecks and Assassinations.

Of six railroad disasters, two occurred under ground and two overhead. In the New York Central tunnel horror seventeen passengers were killed and many injured, while one hundred of the passengers on the two trains in the Paris underground railway that caught fire from a defective dynamo, were asphyxiated.

By the railroad bridge over Dry creek, at Pueblo, Colo., collapsing, seventy-six persons were drowned or crushed to death. Last September the "L" railroad system in New York experienced its first fatal accident, a portion of a train taking a curve plunging into the street. Twelve passengers were killed and forty injured.

In a collision near Knoxville, Tenn., seventy persons were killed and 125 injured, and last year's wreck on the Pennsylvania, at Harrisburg, Pa., was most peculiar, in that a bucking freight train threw a car loaded with dynamite in front of an express train. Smashup and explosion resulted almost simultaneously. The dead numbered twelve and the injured forty.

With what horror the world heard the news that McKinley had been shot, and, ten days later, that he had died. King Humbert, of Italy, fell a victim to an assassin's bullet less than a year earlier, and in the same year Goebel, of Kentucky, was shot down in the streets of the capital.

The disasters that had followed one another in Servia for a number of years culminated in 1903, in the ruthless murder of King Peter and Queen Draga, in their palace, by a cabal of army officers. And then the long string of Russian assassinations, the most prominent victims being the Grand Duke Sergius and the repressive Von Plehve. Poor Russia! What with war, assassinations, massacres, revolutionary movements, insurrections, great strikes, civil war and stern repressive measures, it has indeed been a land of terrible disasters since the outbreak of the war with Japan.

Famine, Strikes, Heat, Panics.

Famine has stalked through certain parts of India, Italy, Spain, and now Japan. When the long-prayed-for rains fell on August 14, 1900, in the Indian famine districts gaunt hunger had already gathered in his toll of thousands of victims. Starving peasants, crying for bread, lined the highways of Andhra last year and before the San Francisco horror came this country was busy showering food on the famine sufferers of Japan. In August of 1900 the miners of Nome were so close to starvation that the United States government dispatched relief thither.

Perhaps the most disastrous strike was that one in the hard coal regions, which was brought to an abrupt end by the intervention of President Roosevelt, after it had been dragging on from May, 1902, into April of the succeeding year. Millions of dollars in profits and wages were lost, not only to operators and miners but to manufacturers and artisans as well, while untold suffering was caused the poor throughout the east during the cold months. So disastrous was the strike of the Fall River cotton operatives that the country had to come to their relief. Colorado was in a state of turbulence for months because of the three-cornered warfare of mine owners, miners' federation and Peabody administration. The striking Lowell textile workers lost a million and a half dollars in wages during the three months that they were on strike, and the striking coal miners of France are depriving themselves of a hundred thousand dollars weekly.

So pronounced were the Carlist disorders in Spain five years ago that General Weyler thought it wise to place Madrid under martial law. A year later five hundred persons were either killed or injured in a riot that took place in Barcelona, and labor riots in Havana, in the same year, resulted in two deaths and injury to eighty-two persons. Of course, Russia has been a land of great riots and disastrous strikes since the outbreak of the war with Japan, and in them thousands of lives—no one can say just how many—have been sacrificed.

A disaster, surely was the falling of the famed Campanile of Venice, in the summer of 1902. The great heat wave that hung over our eastern cities the previous summer caused hundreds of deaths and thousands of prostrations. Two hundred died from too much heat in New York city alone. The fatalities in Philadelphia were even greater; it was the most torrid of the several cities affected. The first of the seven years' arsenic in beer killed sixty and made one thousand persons violently ill at Manchester, England.

While the National Negro Baptist convention of 1902 was in session in Birmingham, Ala., some fool yelled fire and blind panic caused a stampede, in which over one hundred persons had life crushed and trampled out of them. The whole world stood aghast when news spread that with the much-heralded automobile race from Paris to Madrid, May 1903, only a few hours under way, six persons had been killed and many injured. The two governments interested then put a stop to the race, and doubtless kept down the list of victims. A great wave caused by an avalanche of rock falling into a lake at Naesdal, Norway, drowned fifty-nine persons.

Invincible, Hopeful Man.

Only last summer and autumn New Orleans and other Gulf and Southern cities were experiencing the disaster of yellow fever and all the inconveniences that the scourge brings in its train. Now we have the San Francisco horror and the lesser horrors of a similar nature elsewhere in California.

Great and terrible have been the afflictions that have tried our souls and the souls of our fellow-men beyond our country's pale since the century began. But just as victory is frequently snatched from the very jaws of defeat, so, almost invariably, renewed faith in humanity springs buoyantly up in disaster, because of the heroism, the self-sacrifice, the tender sympathy and the generous helping hand strongly in evidence at such a time. And, thank God, in every instance we have refused to be crushed down—have risen supreme above all disasters. This is true in great measure of other people wherever the hand of affliction has fallen. Even now, while San Francisco is busy rebuilding itself, thousands of the villagers who fled from Vesuvius when that great chimney was exceedingly wroth have again taken up the thread of their lives on her lava-streaked sides.

The poet sang truly when he said: "Hope springs eternal in the human breast."

CARUSO'S MISLAID MEMORY.

From the Chicago Inter Ocean.

According to the very latest reports from the managers of the Caruso opera company gathered in New York awaiting the receipts of the various benefits organized for them, Enrico Caruso of the golden voice saved everything he possessed in San Francisco except his memory. He either lost his memory or he mislaid it, and no one has thus far been able to account for it.

Caruso, according to his best recollection, was quite a hero in San Francisco. As soon as he felt the shock he rushed bravely to the wig box of his wabbly room in the Palace hotel and shattered the trembling air with several of the highest notes he had ever sung gratis. Then, returning in greatest excitement to his room, he got into his clothes and secured his revolver, just in time to hold up three Chinese who were trying to steal his three trunks.

It was shortly after this experience that Mr. Caruso lost his memory. He can only remember that he went to Lafayette park, displayed a huge autograph picture of President Roosevelt to the soldiers on guard, and was permitted thereafter to recline upon a choice bit of turf.

There is a property man in New York, however, who is anxious to help Caruso recall his actions on the ill-fated day. This man, also a member of the opera company, lost everything he had, and happened to be standing in Caruso's path while the excited tenor was getting his three trunks together. Caruso, seeing him, impetuously offered the property man a large sum of money if he would only devote his day to looking after the Caruso trunks.

The property man declares that, having nothing else on hand, he agreed, that he not alone watched the trunks but he got them safely to Oakland and shipped them from there to New Orleans. From New Orleans he wired the tenor that his property was safe. Caruso was sailing when he received the wire, so he thoughtfully left an envelope at the Metropolitan opera house for the faithful property man. The other day the latter called for the envelope, carefully tore it open, so as not to mutilate any greenbacks it might contain, and found a card bearing the address in Italy to which the owner wished the baggage forwarded.

Perhaps, after he is once more at home, safe from all save the memory of San Francisco, and far this side of the danger zone of Vesuvius, Caruso may recollect the property man and the circumstances leading up to his following those trunks from San Francisco to New York. But with high priced tax—one can never tell.

When the election night fireworks explosion of November, 1904, happened, Madison Square was packed with thousands of celebrants watching the gubernatorial returns. Fifteen of these merrymakers lost their lives and one hundred were injured, some severely.

Fifty-eight lives were lost when the boiler in a shoe factory in Brockton, Mass., exploded. This was in March of 1905.

Tornadoes, Tidal Waves, Hurricanes.

The wrecking of the United States cruiser Yosemite by a typhoon that hit Guam in 1900 was the first of the series of disasters befalling our navy since the century began. Two years later a typhoon hit Yokohama and the list of the dead contained five hundred names.

All told, wind and water, singly or combined, worked to bring about numerous disasters on land, the greatest of them all being the overwhelming of Galveston by a tornado and tidal wave. Seven thousand lives were lost, and the property damaged was figured out to be thirty million dollars.

A hurricane raging in Tennessee took fifty-one victims. Eighteen of Birmingham's (Ala.) citizens were killed by a tornado, and the tornado that struck Snyder, Okla., killed one hundred and injured one hundred and forty-one. A West Indian hurricane wiped out scores of lives and fifteen million dollars in property. A cloudburst at Clifton, S. C., and another at Hoppner, Ore., coming within a few days of each other, killed fifty and five hundred persons respectively. The combined property loss was four and a half millions. The tornado that swooped down upon Gainesville, Ga., also caused heavy losses in life and property.

The last four disasters occurred in 1903. That year was also marked by big waters. The Paterson flood caused a loss of three millions to that city, sorely tried of recent years by the elements. Two hundred persons were drowned, eight thousand made homeless and four million dollars of damage wrought by the deluge that swept into and about Topeka. At the same time Kansas City and Omaha suffered terribly from high water. This was in late May and early June. In March the height of the Mississippi at New Orleans was 19.5 feet, breaking all high water records. The year previous the Rio Grande and other Texas rivers went on a rampage and before they retired to their channels many a Texan beheld ruin staring him in the face. The year before that much damage was done by exceedingly high water in Pittsburg and Cincinnati.

Disasters on Sea and River.

Most awful of ocean and river disasters was the burning of the excursion steamer General Slocum, in New York waters, a thousand excursionists, mostly women and children, being lost in sight of the city where they lived. When the Pacific Mail steamship Ido de Janeiro struck in a fog off the Golden Gate, in February of 1901, 128 persons went down with her. Three months before thirty-one were lost by the foundering of the steamer Monticello, in the Bay of Fundy, and only last January 136 of the 178 passengers and crew on board the ill-fated Valencia found a watery grave at the entrance of Puget Sound. In the typhoon that raged over Formosa in China and razed storied Manila last year, the steamer Casabella sank and 115 passengers and crew were lost. One hundred and seven lives were sacrificed

Among the Men who Work with Hand or Brain

Rich Men Had No Childhood; Became Workers at Thirteen.

By G. R. Clarke.

"THE man who never was a boy" is the term often applied to J. Clifton Robinson, the English railway promoter. The description fits many millionaires. There has always been a running infringement of the law, moral if not actual, against child labor by this class.

"Any boy can become rich," says Andrew Carnegie, "if he works hard enough," and the early beginning with work for many years as the only sport must be ... counting the cost of most successes.

So many successful Americans have begun at 13 that this may be taken as the average age. Lewis Nixon applied for his appointment in the navy at 13 and had it the next year. Samuel Sloan, former president of the D. L. & W., began life sweeping out a big dry goods store in New York at 13. Col. Pope was selling fruit and vegetables besides working on a farm at 13. Chauncey M. Blair, president of the Merchants National bank, started in the same bank as a messenger boy at his age. Senator Gorman started in the senate as a page at 13 and never left politics all life afterward. Frederick Gilbert Bourne, president of the Singer Machine company, left school the summer he was 13 with a farewell to everybody that meant he would not come back. He had his own way to make and it was decided at home that he must begin. John Mitchell, classed by Lincoln J. Steffens with industrial monarchs under the name of the "mining king," began work in a coal mine when he was 13.

Henry Phipps at $1.25 a Week.

When Henry Phipps was 12 he began work in a shoe factory and by the time he was 13 he left it and went with a jeweler where he got $1.25 a week. Here he had an experience which he remembers to this day. He accepted for his employer a counterfeit $10 bill. This meant the loss of two months' wages. It was cut ... town was full of strangers and it apparently was a hopeless task to find the man who had cheated him. The thought of the two months' wages however spurred him on and he started out, got on the counterfeiter's track, and did not lose it until he had run him to earth and got the money back.

Senator Beveridge's boyhood was one of great toil and hardship. At the age of 12 he was a plow boy, at 14 he was working as a laborer at railroad construction and doing the work to which the strongest men are put, driving an old-fashioned scraper. At 15 he became a logger and a teamster, and by reason of his natural command of men he was put at the head of a logging camp.

George W. Cable was the eldest of four children, his mother being without any means of support. This was when he was 14, and he went to work in a custom house and supported the family.

Hugh Chisholm as Newsboy.

Hugh Chisholm's business career is one which shows a wonderful precocity. It began in 1867 when he was 13. He secured a "run" as a newsboy on a railway train. He became a train newsboy because it was necessary for him to earn his own livelihood. His run was between Detroit and Toronto on the Grand Trunk and he became fast friends with Edison, who ran on the same road between Detroit and Port Huron.

Newsboys then, as now, were paid by commission on sales, but young Chisholm saved a few dollars and got together a stock of his own. From that time his daily earnings were nearly twice as large as before. His next investment was in a course in bookkeeping and penmanship in a business college in Toronto. He took his instruction on the week day evenings that he passed in that city, studying at odd minutes on trains and at the western end of his run.

His next step was ... control of the news routes on the Grand Trunk as far east as Portland, Me., selling on commission. He took his brothers into partnerships and they kept getting new routes until in 1866 they had contracted to sell papers on trains from Chicago to Portland and Halifax and also in northern New England, northern New York and far up in Canada, as well as on steamboat lines. Their routes altogether covered more than 5,000 miles.

They had 200 newsboys and put them in uniforms and caps, which was the beginning of railway uniforms and brass buttons. Soon after he established a printing business at Portland and turned out for sale by his own agents pictures, pamphlets, albums, tourists' guides and souvenir publications descriptive of scenery along the principal lines of railway. All this was accomplished before he was 20.

Pegging Shoes at Seven.

When William Lewis Douglas was 5 years old his father was drowned at sea. His uncle ran a cobbler's shop and when he was 7 years old he was bound out and put to work pegging shoes by hand. His uncle kept him at work from sunrise till sunset and worked him beyond his strength and only sent him to school for short periods each year. When he was 11 years old he went back to his mother and then his uncle made a proposition that he would allow the boy $5 a month and his keep if he would return, and back to the little shoe shop and unremitting toil he went. He staid another four years, when an opportunity came that looked great.

He got work in a cotton mill in Plymouth, where he was to get 33 cents a day. He worked here four months and broke his leg. The accident gave him a term at school and then the family poverty lashed him back to work and he was put at heavy boots. He gave it up after this and went into a store as shoemaker and learned the commercial details of his business. With another bootmaker he earned enough to put and fit shoes and then he started a little place of his own. It was with $875 he borrowed and he started manufacturing shoes.

Herbert Vreeland started at 13 handling ice. He is the son of Abraham Vreeland, who was the pastor of the Dutch Reformed church at ... N. Y. Herbert was the youngest of seven children and after going to school until he was 13 he started to earn his living filling ice carts. The family moved to Newark, N. J., and the boy worked hard and faithfully at handling ice until he struck his first railroading job.

Carnegie's Strenuous Childhood.

When Carnegie was 10 his father came home one day and said, "Andy, I've no more work." That was the last of his boyhood. They came to America soon afterwards and he started work in a steam cotton factory, tending bobbins. In less than a year he had been taken from the factory and put to running an engine in the new works. Here he got $2 ... a day. Then he got an increase of salary by doing a little clerical work in the office between times. This is his own account of his next rise:

"I awoke from a dream that has carried me away back to the early days of boyhood, the day when the little white haired Scotch laddie dressed in a blue jacket walked with his father to the telegraph office at Pittsburg to undergo examination as applicant for a position as messenger boy. If you want an idea of heaven upon earth imagine what it was to be taken from a dark cellar where I fired the engine from morning till night and dropped into an office where light shone on all sides and around me books, papers and pencils in profusion, and O, the ticking of those mysterious brass instruments on the desk annihilating space and standing with throbbing spirits ready to convey intelligence to the world. This was my first glimpse of paradise."

He was 14 soon after this when his father died and he was the support of his mother and his younger brother.

Why He Is My Assistant.

Head of Invoice Department of Large Wholesale House Tells Why He Made Adair "Assistant Head."

A CLERK is a clerk and a clerk is a machine.

Of course there are exceptions to this. Plenty of them undoubtedly, for the number of clerks is legion and it is unjust to say that all of them are mechanical in their work. But also it is to be said truthfully that the majority of them are.

Their work makes them so. They are not good clerks, not efficient, until they have reduced themselves and their day's duties to a system until they have it down to mechanical detail in every way. They have got to be so, else they are not good clerks. It is a deplorable fact, because it often means decay or atrophy of many qualities highly necessary to a successful career.

Comparatively few clerks display the qualities necessary in an executive position. This is not their fault. They may have the qualities in them awaiting merely the opportunity to make them develop. But as the opportunity seldom comes it happens that they seldom show the qualities.

Clerks Make Poor Executives.

Despite all the talk prevalent about the young man starting to grind away at the desk as the first step toward the top, I am afraid that there are plenty of other places where he could start with more profit and with more certainty of achieving his aims.

I say this to make the point. It is hard to find a man for an executive position among your clerks. That's the idea I wish to convey before starting in to tell, or to attempt to tell, just why I picked Adair to be my assistant in this department. It is difficult to see just what is in a clerk, and although you may have several men in your department who would be all right in an executive position, how are you going to know it when they don't show it to you in any way?

If clerks would only realize that their work while serving as clerks determines their chances for getting the bigger things there would be less loafing, less drinking, less cigaret smoking, and less O what's the use talk among them. That's all a man has got to judge by when he goes to pick out men from among his clerks—the way they show up as clerks. He can't figure: Here, well, this fellow isn't anything remarkable as a clerk, but he looks as if he might make a corking assistant. Business is built upon tangible things. The possibilities that are in a man aren't tangible unless they have been demonstrated in conclusive fashion.

Needed New Assistant in a Hurry.

I had to fire my assistant suddenly for crookedness. I discovered that he was working as capper in the office for some loan company. Of course that wouldn't do. So he went between two nights and that left me without an assistant. I had to have one in a hurry too. The work was piling up like it meant to swamp me. I had my hands full with my own work. When I had to do my assistant's in addition it was just a little over the safety limit.

All these things had something to do with my making Adair my assistant. Adair wasn't an ideal man for the position, far from it, when I picked him out. Probably isn't now. But I had to have a man in a hurry. I had to have him out of this department, because it takes a man three months to be broken into the general routine here. So I began to look over my clerks.

It was then I discovered for the first time just what a scarcity of executive material there is apparent among forty or fifty clerks.

Our clerks are of a high grade, well paid, and satisfied with their treatment for the most part. Our application blank is a severe one and we live up to it just as much as we can. But when it came to selecting an assistant from them they ran small and of little promise.

Three Men Who Had Chances.

There were three men who looked on the surface as if they might be possible candidates for the position. There was Mitchell, who has charge of the price list, a good man, good clerk, quick, accurate and reliable, filled his job like a little ..., and made little fuss about it.

I gently threw the proposition up to him and it nearly scared him to death. He'd never expected it, never looked for anything bigger than the job he held, I suppose, and he idea of getting to be next to the head of the department was too big for him. Altogether too big. You could see it in his face the ... he was ... to. Of course he came down out of the air presently and said why yes, he guessed he could hold it down all right. But his first astonishment had done for him. If he had never expected anything like this, of course he had never made any effort to prepare for it. That let him out of the running.

Cahoon was chief checker of the expert invoices. He was the oldest man in the department in point of service and a typical clerk, steady as a machine and twice as reliable. He worked by the side of Adair. Adair was grief clerk. In big offices like this the clerks call errors, complaints or anything that must be looked up among old papers "grief," and I was Adair's job ... look this stuff up. He and Cahoon had stools side by side because their work threw them much together.

Cahoon Was Good Old Machine.

Adair wasn't as old with the firm nor so reliable as Cahoon. So sizing them up together I naturally tried out Cahoon first. But he was the typical old clerk, a machine, a good old machine, but one that you would have to make over down to the smallest cog to make it available for anything but its old job. Wouldn't do at all.

Then I went for Adair. He was about my last hope in the department and I didn't want to go outside of it for my man. There were a whole lot of things about Adair that I didn't like. He was fresh and flippant to a considerable degree, and this doesn't set good on a man who is supposed to be an example to forty or fifty men under him. But he could work like a horse. And he was enthusiastic. And he didn't turn a hair when the proposition was put to him. Took it as a matter of course.

"When would you be ready to turn your work over to somebody else in case I should give you this job?" I asked.

"Tomorrow morning," said he.

Have Plenty of Fun If You Would Succeed.

John Coleman

"HAVE a good time if you would do good work and succeed."

This is the dictum of William De Witt Hyde, who as president of Bowdoin college should know something about successful work and workers. Personally Mr. Hyde believes it to be quite as much as training or skill in the equipment necessary to a successful career. Lacking this ability to enjoy life, to have a good time, he would expect highest success of no man. In a thoughtful chapter of his recent book, "The College Man and the College Woman," he advances telling arguments in favor of abundant play, frequent and generous "good times" for those who would win effective working records. "The Personality of the Teacher" is the chapter's heading, and since an attractive well rounded personality is of equal importance to conscientious workers in other fields, he Hyde pled for fun is well worthy of general note.

"For nearly ... years," says the writer, "I have had to employ teachers every year and to recommend teachers to others. I have seen many succeed and some fail. But I have never seen a success that was to be accounted for by scholarship and training alone. I have never seen a failure that could not be accounted for on other grounds.

Cannot Get On Without Play.

"You simply cannot go on healthily, happily, hopefully without play," he says, addressing those who would attain to success in their chosen profession. "Of course you have games you are fond of playing. With walking, riding the bicycle, driving, golf, tennis, croquet, skating, cards, checkers, billiards, rowing, sailing, hunting, fishing and the endless variety of games and sports available, a teacher who does not do a lot of them in vacations and a good deal of them on half holidays and some of them almost every day is falling far below the epitome standard of what a teacher ought to do and be."

The earnestness of Mr. Hyde's belief may be judged from the conclusion he attains:

"If I should learn of any candidate for a position as professor in Bowdoin college that he ... and enjoyed ... of these things, though he should be backed by the highest recommendations the leading universities of America and Europe could bestow, I would ... as read the letters he brought. For however great he might be as a scholar I should know in advance that he would be a failure in the teaching of American youth."

How Great Men Enjoy Themselves.

That more devoted workers fail, become victims of nervous disorders, die prematurely for lack of sufficient play and recreation than from any other cause has long been the sorrowful conviction of a world famous Chicago physician, who frequently makes his unwilling patients take to duck rearing, amateur photography, fancy work, all sorts of unexpected avocations, in the successful effort to restore them to normality of tone and working ability. Science investigators have declared that actual ruts are worn in the gray matter of the brain by too active and protracted thinking along given lines. The world's greatest workers always have had their cherished means of play or refreshment in which to find rest and relief from the nerve racking, vitality consuming daily demands and occupations. Without such means of recreation and mental repose humanity would have missed much effective invaluable toil. The more unceasing, exacting the character of the daily task, the more urgent, imperative the need of vigorous plentiful play.

Lincoln told funny stories in the intervals of heart breaking responsibility and arduous effort. Gladstone found his "good times" in felling trees and the supervision of his Hawarden estate. President Roosevelt, a notable worker, enjoys life hugely in many directions. Rockefeller cultivates violets. Carnegie loves golf. Similar examples might be quoted in dozens. By the deep if possibly unconscious wisdom displayed by these unsparing toilers Mr. Hyde would have his readers profit. The importance of play as a duty no less than a recreation he suggests in a meaty paragraph that should be widely absorbed:

"Are you playing as much as Epicurus would tell you that you ought to play?" he pertinently inquires. "Do you live in care proof, worry tight compartments so that the little annoyances of one section of your life are not allowed to spill over and spoil the other sections of your life? Have you friends with whom you spend delightful hours in unrestrained companionship? Have you books which you read for the pure fun of it? Do you go to concerts and entertainments and plays as often as you can afford the time and money? Take it altogether, are you having a good time, or if not, are you resorting to every available means of getting one?"

Great Test of Happiness.

Five principles ranging all the way from epicureanism to Christianity, Mr. Hyde regards as highly important to the great task of happiness, without which the best work seldom can be accomplished. From Epicurus he would have the worker learn to take into his life all the innocent pleasure possible. Stoicism should teach him to shut out superfluous griefs and restrain worry. Plato offers the lesson of rising above all petty details at least periodically, living a high, calm life, free and far apart from mere humdrum routine that dulls the ordinary existence. Aristotle should help in developing that sense of proportion that puts things in their right places and enables the student to subjugate the lower to the higher, even to shirk lesser obligations, now and then, for the sake of the "good time" that means more effective fulfillment of the greater. Christianity should make him so one in heart and sympathy with his fellows that a "good time" becomes easily possible any time, anywhere.

"I will guarantee perfect success to any well-trained teacher who will faithfully incorporate these five principles into his personal life," says Mr. Hyde, in closing his essay. The teacher who lives up to them, he maintains, "can no more help being a personal success than the sunlight and rain can help making the earth the fruitful and beautiful place that it is."

"I've no pill for you," recently said a great physician to the feminine "nervous bankrupt," who faced him with wide despairing eyes. "What you need is fun and plenty of it. You feel too poor to attend the theaters frequently? Then buy, beg, borrow, or steal some young puppies or kittens and play with them in the sun. Pretend that you are ten years old again. Pick dandelions and make daisy chains with the other children. Go down to the beach and watch the waves curl up on the silver sand."

Huge Trade in Noveltles Built Up by Advertisers.

By J. S. Mockin.

WHEN you get your calendars for the year of 1906 it is ten to one that you never will give a thought to the question of where and how they are made. When your grocer, butcher, or haberdasher hands you a mirror, pocket-book, comb or other small novelty bearing an advertisement of his business you will accept it as a matter of course, and wonder not at all as to the source of these things.

The custom of giving away advertising novelties at each holiday season has grown to be so universal that it would be only a cessation of the custom that would attract notice. The number and variety of novelties given away each year run into astonishing numbers, their value into millions of dollars and the manufacturing and selling of them has developed into a great industry.

So widely has this industry grown and so widely has the custom of giving away something been adopted by merchants and business men in all lines that it is safe to say that every person of age in the United States each year receives an average of two presents bearing advertisements. Some will receive many more than this. Some will receive so many that they will deem the custom a nuisance, but there is no manner of escape from them. From every large city in the country salesmen have radiated out into the country, into small towns and cities, even into the new settlements of the north and west, and even if one goes into a town that is but a year old, it is not infrequent to find the advertising novelty waiting there.

Every Line of Business Affected.

Apparently there is no line of business which does without the advertising novelty. From the largest railroad or bank in the country down to the smallest cross roads general store every business man buys and distributes this kind of advertising. It does not matter how much he advertises or whether a firm carries it also has its give-away advertising as a side line.

In many cases the novelties thus given away are expensive. A liquor firm recently gave away 1,600 clocks which cost $6 each. This was a high figure even for a firm which goes in for expensive advertising. Yet it is not uncommon for a firm to give away novelties that cost a dollar or more each.

Of course, the average paid is much lower than this. The range of variety in this ... is ... by the range of price. Advertising novelties may be had for $5 per 1,000. They may also be had for any price one wishes to pay and in any kind. From the old halftone calendar which once constituted the great bulk of the novelty house's line, the variety of articles used for this purpose has spread until a complete line now embraces approximately 200 numbers. From being an industry usually subordinated to the printing or publishing business it has spread until now there are hundreds of firms engaged in it, thousands of salesmen on the road and millions of dollars of capital invested.

Huge Growth of Novelty Trade.

The growth of the advertising novelty business is typified in the growth of one Chicago house, the pioneers in this line. Twenty years ago the founder of this firm began to sell advertising novelties in a small way. He owned a small job printing press and he began to print his line on this.

The line was not extensive. It included a dozen different half tone calendars of small size, two sizes of rulers, one kind of lead pencil and two or three styles of memorandum books. Such a line ... to the modern novelty man's line would seem childish, but this was at the beginning of the custom of giving away novelties, and the small line ... at once. The founder of the ... shut up shop and went on a short trip into a neighboring state, the first trip made in this section on this mission.

He ... with but poor ... at first. ... was not then accepted as a ... and ... who did believe ... in the ... on the country fences. The young ... could not convince th... that it would be good ... cents for ... to ... printed on it. For a ... he ... and had nothing to show for his labor. Then finally ... as a gift to ... ment. The merchant ... skeptical, but accepted the deal in a spirit of ...

The young ... back to the city, printed the 300 ... and ... them. It was immediately after the opening of the school season. The merchant who received the rulers began to hand them out to the children as they came into his store. From that instant the small merchant in small towns, and the large merchant in large towns, was doomed to advertise with advertising novelties.

The rulers made a pronounced hit with the younger element of the town in which they were first distributed. Every youngster had a ruler, or had been to the store and been disappointed. The merchant distributed the last of them within a week after their arrival and promptly wired a rush order for 500 more. Although competition had not then reached the acute stage in which it is today, no merchant could allow his neighbor to get far ahead of him in striving for trade. When one merchant in a town began to give away rulers the rest must seek for some way to keep even in the race for public favor. The result was that the young man who had made a merchant a gift of a ... order of rulers ... with ... other merchants in the same town. The young man put two salesmen on the road and began to print his article.

From this small beginning sprung a business which is now capitalized at close to a million dollars a year, which occupies three floors in a large factory building, has a force of sixty salesmen scattered in every corner of the country, and which gives employment to ... the half ... small items that ... the ... has developed a line including 200 varieties, which range from less than 1 cent each to a dollar, and to complete which the novelty ... Germany, Japan and China ... In this line are half a dozen skilled inventors whose ... it is to invent new novelties, and a ... of artists, whose work ... to make the calendars, hangers, and pictures which the ... manufacturing ... ingenuity, detail and chance ... plenty it is doubtful if any ... of manufacturing can compete with that of advertising novelty making.

... into the novelty ... in such a ... may be had ... the following list, which comprises only a few of the articles actually manufactured in the house. Fans, calendars, picture cards, memorandum books, coin bags, purses, match boxes, puzzles, tin whistles, wagon covers, paraffin signs, laundry bags, aprons, tape measures, knife covers, pipe racks, cape hats, book marks, and blotters. To make these articles requires men from half a dozen trades and girls skilled in many kinds of work. Printers, binders, gold leaf stampers, tin workers, leather workers, all contribute their work to the total, often two trades or more working on one piece. Girls are employed for sewing, pasting, and a hundred of other things. The wages paid compare with those of a first class bindery.

The imported articles usually exceed the home made in value and artistic quality. Germany holds the palm for the best printed color pictures and papier maché articles. Sweden sends matches to be pasted with advertisements, as does Italy. France is foremost in the toy line, and China and Japan are drawn upon for fans, mats, and umbrellas.

... Has Special Seasons

The business runs largely to seasons. The principal ... of the year begins late in October and runs until the first of the year. The chief product during this term is calendars and other holiday goods. For two months, or until the first of March, there is a slack season, after which the ... and ... building during which ... A million ... is not an unusual ... for a single factory to turn out in a season. After the fans are out of the way the leather goods season starts in, but between the two there is generally a period of several weeks when there is little business to be done.

While new firms are entering this field ... it cannot be said that there is little chance for the young man with small capital to enter it with ... of achieving success. Many printers carry a ... line of advertising novelties and do a ... all ... in this manner, but the bulk of the trade is garnered by the salesmen of the large companies and to compete with them ... a line which only a large capital ... together. It is a constantly growing ... but it is one in which the ... in it are ... in a ... to keep ... with the ...

BY ANTHONY HOPE

THE PRINCESS HAD NO CHOICE BUT TO DISMOUNT.

THERE is a swift little river running by the village of Hofbrau, and on the river is a mill, kept, in the days of King Rudolf the Third, by a sturdy fellow, who lived there all alone. The king knew him, having alighted at his house for a draught of beer as he rode hunting, and it was of him the king spoke when he said to the queen, "There is, I believe, but one man in the country whom Osra could not move, and that is the miller of Hofbrau." But, though he addressed the queen, it was his sister at whom he aimed the speech. The Princess herself was sitting by, and when she heard the king, she said:

"In truth I do not desire to move any man. What but trouble comes of it? But who is this miller?"

The king told her where the miller was to be found, and he added: "If you convert him to the love of woman you shall have the finest bracelet in Strelsau."

"There is nothing, sir, so remote from my thoughts or desire as to convert your miller," said Osra scornfully.

And in this, at the moment, she spoke truthfully, but being left alone for some days at the Castle of Zenda, which is but a few miles distant from Hofbrau, she found time hang very heavy on her hands; indeed, she did not know what to do with herself for weariness, and so for this reason and none other at all, one day she ordered her horse and rode off with a single groom into the forest. Coming, as the morning went on, to a wide road, she asked the groom where it led to. "To Hofbrau, madam," he answered. "It is not more than a mile further on." Osra waited for a few moments; then she said, "I will ride on and see the village, for I have been told that it is pretty. Wait here till I return." And she rode on, smiling a little, and with a delicate tint of color in her cheeks.

Before long she saw the river, and the mill on the river, and, coming to the mill, she saw the miller sitting before his door, smoking a long pipe, and she called out to him, asking him to sell her a glass of milk.

"You can have it for the asking," said the miller. He was a good looking, fair fellow, and wore a scarlet cap. "There is a pail of it just inside the door behind me." Yet he did not rise, but lay there, lolling luxuriously in the sun. For he did not know Osra, never having been to Strelsau in his life, and to Zenda three or four times only, and that when the princess was not there. Moreover—though this, as must be allowed, is not to the purpose—he had sworn never again to go so far afield.

Being answered in this manner, and at the same time desiring the milk, the princess had no choice but to dismount. This she did, and passed by the miller, pausing a moment to look at him with bright, curious eyes that flashed from under the brim of her wide-rimmed feathered hat; but the miller blinked lazily up at the sun and took no heed of her.

Osra passed on, found the pail, poured out a cup of milk and drank it. Then, refilling the cup, she carried it to the miller.

"Will you not have some?" said she, with a smile.

"I was too lazy to get it," said the miller, and he held out his hand, but did not otherwise change his position.

Osra's brow was puckered and her cheek flushed as she knelt down, holding the cup of milk so that the miller could reach it. He took and drained it, gave it back to her, and put his pipe in his mouth again. He puffed and blinked away, never so much as looking at her.

"What have you for dinner?" asked she presently.

"A piece of cold pie," said he. "There's enough for two if you're hungry."

"Oh, ay, but I cannot weary myself with heating it."

"I will heat it," said the princess, and, rising, she went into the house and made up the fire, which was almost burnt out; then she heated the pie and set the room in order and laid the table and drew a large jug of beer from the cask. Next she placed an armchair ready for the miller and put the jug by it; then she filled a pipe from the bowl of tobacco and set a cushion in the chair. And all this while she hummed a tune, and from time to time smiled gayly. Lastly she arranged a chair by the elbow of the miller's chair; then she went out and told him that his dinner was ready, and he stumbled to his feet with a sigh of laziness and walked before her into the house.

"May I come?" cried she.

"Ay, there is enough for two," said the miller of Hofbrau without looking round.

So she followed him in. He sank into the armchair and sat there, for a moment surveying the room, which was so neat, and the table so daintily laid, and the pie so steaming hot. And he sighed, saying:

"It was like this before poor mother died:" and he fell to on a great portion of pie with which Osra had piled his plate.

When he had finished eating—which thing did not happen for some time—she held the jug while he took a long draught; then she brought a coal in the tongs and held it while he lit his pipe from it; then she sat down by him. For several moments he puffed and then at last he turned his head and looked at Princess Osra, and she dropped her long lashes and cast down her eyes; and next she lifted her eyes and glanced for an instant at the miller, and murmured shyly: "What is it, sir? Why do you look at me?"

"You seem to be a handy wench," observed the miller. "The pie was steaming hot, and yet was not burnt; the beer was well frothed, but not shaken nor thickened, and the pipe draws well. Where does your father dwell?"

"He is dead, sir," said the Princess Osra, very demurely.

"And your mother?" pursued the miller.

"She also is dead."

"There is small harm in that," said the miller, thoroughly, and Osra turned away her head to hide her smile.

"Are you not very lonely, living here all by yourself?" she asked, a moment later.

"Indeed, I have to do everything for myself," said the miller, sadly.

"And there is nobody to care for you?"

"No, nor to look after my comfort," said the miller. "Have you any kindred?"

"I have two brothers, sir, but they are married now, and have no need of me."

The miller laid down his pipe and, setting his elbow on the table, faced Princess Osra.

"Hum," said he. "And is it likely you will ride this way again?"

"I may chance to do so," said Osra, and now there was a gleam of malicious triumph in her eyes and she was thinking already how the bracelet would look on her arm.

"Ah," said the miller, and after a pause he added: "If you do, come half an hour before dinner, and you can lend a hand in making it ready. Where did you get those fine clothes?"

"My mistress gave them to me," answered Osra. "She had cast them off."

"And that horse you rode?"

"It is my master's. I have it to ride when I do my mistress' errands."

"And will your master and mistress do anything for you if you leave your service?"

"I have been promised a present if—" said Osra, and she paused in apparent confusion.

"Ay," said the miller, nodding sagaciously, and he rose slowly from the armchair. "Will you be in this way again in a week or so?" he asked.

"I think it is very likely," answered Princess Osra.

"Then look in," said the miller, "about half an hour before dinner." And he nodded his head again very significantly at Osra, and, turning away, went to his work as a man goes who would far rather sit still in the sun. But just as he reached the door he turned his head and asked, "Are you sturdy?"

"I am strong enough, I think," said she.

"A sack of flour is a heavy thing for a man to lift by himself," remarked the miller, and with that he passed through the door and left her alone.

Then she cleared the table, put the pie, or what little was left, in the larder, set the room in order, filled the pipe, stood the jug handy by the cask, and, with a look of great satisfaction on her face, tripped out to where her horse was, mounted and rode away.

The next week, and the interval had seemed long to her and no less long to the miller of Hofbrau, she came again, and so the week after, and in the week following that she came twice, and on the second of these two days, after dinner, the miller did not go off to his sacks, but he followed her out of the house, pipe in hand, when she went to mount her horse, and as she was about to mount he said:

"Indeed, you are a handy wench."

"You say much of my hands, but nothing of my face," remarked Princess Osra.

"Of your face?" repeated the miller in some surprise. "What should I say of your face?"

"Well, is it not a comely face?" asked Osra, turning it round, that he might be better able to answer her question.

The miller regarded her for some minutes, then a slow smile spread on his lips.

"Oh, ay, it is well enough," said he. Then he laid a floury finger on her arm and he continued: "If you come next week, why, it is but half a mile to church. I'll have the cart ready and bid the priest be there. What is your name?" For he had not before asked Osra's name.

"Rosa Schwartz," said she, and her face was all alight with triumph and amusement.

"Yes, I shall be very comfortable with you," said the miller. "We will be at the church an hour before noon, so that there may be time afterward for the preparation of dinner."

"That will be on Thursday in next week?" asked Osra.

"Ay, on Thursday," said the miller, and he turned on his heel. But in a minute he turned again, saying, "Give me a kiss, then, since we are to be man and wife." And he came slowly toward her, holding his arms open.

"Nay, the kiss will wait till Thursday. Maybe there will be less flour on your face then." And with a laugh she dived under his outstretched hands and made her escape. And, the day being warm, the miller did not put himself out by pursuing her, but stood where he was, with a broad, comfortable smile on his lips, and so he watched her ride away.

Now, as she rode, the princess was much occupied in thinking of the miller of Hofbrau. Elated and triumphant as she was at having won from him a promise of marriage, she was yet somewhat vexed that he had not shown a more passionate affection, and this clouded her brow for full half an hour. But then her face cleared. "Still waters run deep," said she to herself. "He is not like court gallants, who have learned to make love as soon as they learn to walk, and cannot talk to a woman without bowing and grimacing and sighing at every word. The miller has a deep nature, and surely I have won his heart, or he would not take me for his wife. Poor miller! I pray that he may not grieve over-bitterly when I make the truth known to him." And then, at the thought of the grief of the miller, her face was again clouded, but it was cleared when she considered of the great triumph that she had won, and how she would enjoy it with the king and would have the finest bracelet in all Strelsau as a gift from him. Thus she arrived at the castle in the height of amusement and exultation.

It chanced that the king also came to Zenda that night to spend a week hunting the boar in the forest, and when Osra, all blushing and laughing, told him of her success with the miller of Hofbrau, he was greatly amused and swore that no such girl ever lived, and applauded her, renewing his promise of the bracelet, and he declared that he would himself ride with her to Hofbrau on the wedding day, and see how the poor miller bore his disappointment.

"Indeed, I do not see how you are going to excuse yourself to him," he laughed.

"A purse of 200 crowns must do that office for me," said she.

"What, will crowns patch a broken heart?"

"His broken heart must heal itself, as men's broken hearts do [illegible]."

"In truth, sister, I have known them [illegible] themselves. Let us hope it may be so with the miller of Hofbrau."

"At the worst I have avenged the wrongs of women on him. It is more durable that any man should scorn us, be he king or miller."

"It is indeed very proper that he should suffer great pangs," agreed the king, "in spite of his plaster of crowns. I shall love to see the stolid fellow sighing and moaning like a lovesick courtier."

So they agreed to ride together to the miller's at Hofbrau on the day appointed for the wedding, and both of them waited with impatience for it. But with the bad luck that pursues mortals (even though they be princes) in this poor world, it happened that early in the morning of the Thursday a great officer came riding posthaste from Strelsau to take the king's commands on high matters of state, and although Rudolf was sorely put out of temper by this untoward interruption, yet he had no alternative but to transact the business before he rode to the miller's at Hofbrau. So she sat fretting and fuming while [illegible] and [illegible] walked [illegible] down the [illegible] drawbridge [illegible] long also [illegible] before the king could escape from his affairs. The hour of the wedding was already come, and doubtless the miller of Hofbrau was waiting with the priest [illegible]. And indeed, it was 1 o'clock [illegible] before the king set out from Zenda, and they had then a ride of an hour and a half; and all this when Osra should have been at the miller's at 11 o'clock.

"Poor man, he will be [illegible] mad with waiting and with anxiety for me," cried Osra. "I must give him another hundred crowns by [illegible]." And she added after a pause, "I pray he may not take it too much to heart, Rudolf."

"Indeed, it is a serious matter," rebuked the princess, who thought the king's smile out of place.

"It was not so when you began it," said her brother, and Osra was silent. Then about 2:30 they came in sight of the mill. Now the king dismounted while they were still several hundred yards away, and tied his horse to a tree in a clump by the wayside, and when they came near to the mill he made a circuit and approached from the side, and creeping along the house hid himself behind a large water-butt, which stood just under the window, and from that spot he could hear what passed inside the house, although he could not see. But Osra rode up to the front of the mill, as she had been accustomed to do, and, getting down from her horse, walked up to the door. The miller's cart stood in the yard of the mill, but the horse was not in the shafts, and neither the miller nor anybody else was to be seen about, and the door of the house was shut.

"He must be waiting at the church," said she. "But I will look in and make sure. Indeed, I feel half afraid to meet him." And her heart was beating rapidly and her face was rather pale as she walked up to the door, for she feared what the miller might do in the passion of his disappointment on learning who she was and that she could not [illegible] Now [illegible] she [illegible] the priest of the village [illegible] Hofbrau [illegible] were sleeping very comfortably and snoring [illegible]. The princess [illegible] at this spectacle, said softly:

"Poor fellow! He grew weary of waiting for me, and was compelled to take his dinner. And, like the kind man he is, he has entertained the priest also [illegible] so that he should be [illegible] I arrived. Indeed I am [illegible] the poor man loves me very [illegible]. Well, well, [illegible] they are all the same. Heigh-ho! Why did I deceive him?" And she walked up to the miller's chair and leant over the back of it, and lightly touched the red cap with her fingers, and he put up his hand and brushed with it as though he brushed away a fly, but gave no other sign of wakening.

Then the king called softly from behind the water-butt under the window:

"Is he there, Osra? Is he there?"

"The poor man has fallen asleep in weariness," she answered. "But the priest is here, ready to marry us. Oh, Rudolf, I am so sorry for what I have done."

At this moment the miller of Hofbrau sat up in his chair and gave a great sneeze, and by this sound the priest also was awakened. Osra came forward and stood between them. The miller looked at her, and then he looked to the priest and said:

"It is she, father. She has come."

The priest rubbed his hands together, and smiled uncomfortably.

"We waited two hours," said he, glancing at the clock. "See, it is 3 o'clock now."

"I am sorry you waited so long," said Osra, "but I could not come before. And—and now that I am come I cannot—"

"You should have been here at eleven," said the miller. "I went to church at eleven, and the priest was there, and my cousin Gertrude to be your maid. And there we waited hard on two hours, and you did not come."

"I am very sorry," pleaded Princess Osra.

"And now that you are come," pursued the miller, scratching his head again, "I do not know what we are to do."

At this the Princess Osra, thinking that an opportunity had come, took the purse of 600 crowns from under her cloak and laid it on the table.

"What is this?" said the miller, for the first time showing some eagerness.

"They are for you," said Osra, and she watched him while he unfastened the purse. Then he poured the crowns out on the table and counted them one by one till he had told all the six hundred. Then he raised his hands above his [illegible] and sighed [illegible] looked across at the priest.

"[illegible]," said the miller, "and [illegible] that she is [illegible] and very fond of me." And he began to gather up the crowns [illegible] purse.

"I trust I have a handy wench," said [illegible], smiling very graciously. "Indeed I have a great regard for the [illegible]."

"Not [illegible]," interrupted the priest.

"Six hundred," sighed the miller, "and [illegible] she has but two hundred. Still, she is a handy wench and very sturdy. I doubt if you could lift a sack yourself, as she can," and he looked doubtfully at Osra's slender figure.

"I do not know why you talk of Gertrude," said the princess petulantly. "What is Gertrude to me?"

"I waited two hours," said the miller. "And Gertrude urged me, saying that you would not come, and that she would look after me better than you, being one of the family. And she said that it was hard that she should have no husband, while her own cousin married a stranger. And since it was all the same to me, provided I got a handy and sturdy wench——"

"What!" cried the Princess Osra.

"It being," pursued the miller of Hofbrau, "all the same to me, so that I got what I wanted, why, when you did not come——"

"He married his cousin," said the priest.

A sudden, loud burst of laughter came from the window. All three turned round, but the king ducked his head and crouched again behind the water-butt before they saw him.

"Who was that?" cried the priest.

"A lad that came to hold my horse," answered Osra hastily, and then she turned fiercely on the miller.

"And that," she said, "was all you wanted. I thought you loved me."

"Ay, I liked you very well," said the miller. "You are a handy ——" A stamp of her foot drowned the rest.

"And this Gertrude—is she pretty?" demanded Osra.

"Gertrude is well enough," said the miller. "But she has only 200 crowns." And he put the purse, now full again, on the table, with a resigned sigh.

"And you shall have no more!" cried Osra, snatching up her purse in great rage. "And you and Gertrude may——"

"What of Gertrude?" came at this moment from the door of the room where the sacks were. The princess turned around and saw in the doorway a short and very broad girl, with a very wide face and straggling hair. The girl's nose was very flat and her eyes were small; but her great mouth smiled good-naturedly, and as the princess looked she let slip to the ground a sack of flour that she had been carrying on her sturdy back.

"Ay, Gertrude is well enough," said the miller, looking at her contentedly. "She is very strong and willing."

There was a crash upon the floor and the 600 crowns rolled out of the purse and scattered hither and thither all over the floor.

"Ah, you are the other girl!" said Gertrude with much amusement. "And that was your dowry? It is large. I am glad you did not come in time. But see, I'll pick it up for you. Nay, don't take on. I dare say you'll find another husband."

"Ay, you'll find another husband," nodded the priest encouragingly.

"Ay, you'll find another husband," assented the miller placidly. "And [illegible] as one girl is pretty nearly as good as another, if she is handy and sturdy, so one husband is as good as another, if he can keep a house over [illegible]."

Princess Osra said nothing. But Gertrude, having picked up the crowns, came to her with a full apron and said:

"Hold up your lap and I'll pour them in. They'll get you a good husband."

Then Princess Osra suddenly bent and kissed Gertrude's cheek, and she said gently:

"I hope you have got a good husband, my dear; but let him do some work for himself. And keep the 600 crowns as a present from me, for he will value you more with 800 than with 200."

Then she turned to the miller; and she bit her lip and dashed her hand once across her eyes and said:

"And you, miller, are the only invincible man I have found in all the kingdom. Therefore, good luck and a good wife to you." And she gave a little short laugh and turned and walked out of the cottage, leaving them all spellbound in wonder.

One day King Rudolf rode again to the miller of Hofbrau, and, having sent for the priest, told the three enough of the truth, saying that the affair was the outcome of a jest at court; and he made each of them a handsome present, and vowed them to secrecy by their fealty and attachment to his person and his honor.

"Then we are but quits, and all is well," said the miller. "Gertrude, the jug, my beer!"

And so, indeed, it seemed to the king that they were but quits, and he said so to the Princess Osra. But he declared that she had so far prevailed with the miller as to make him desire marriage as a wholesome and useful thing in itself, although she had not persuaded him that it was of great moment whom a man married. Therefore, he was anxious to give her the bracelet which he had promised, and more than once prayed her to accept it. But Osra saw that laugh that lurked in the king's eye, and would not consent to have the bracelet; and for a long time she did not love to speak of the miller of Hofbrau. Yet once, when the king on some occasion cried out [illegible] impatiently that all [illegible] were [illegible] she said:

"[illegible] you find [illegible] brau!" And [illegible]

SOME TOOTHSOME TALES

From the New York Tribune.

IT MIGHT not be easy to discover who was the forerunner of the great and useful company of dentists that now inhabit the land, inflicting agony upon thousands that they may have peace through suffering, but one of the early advertisements of Boston dentists appeared in "The Boston Gazette" under the date of December 19, 1768, and is doubly interesting because of the undying fame that came to this puller of teeth a number of years after the following "ad" appeared:

"Whereas many perfons are fo unfortunate as to lofe their Fore-teeth by Accident, and otherways, to their great Detriment, not only in looks, but fpeaking both in Public and Private:—This is to inform all fuch, that they may have them re-placed with artificial Ones, that look as well as the Natural, and anfers the End of Speaking to all Intents, by PAUL REVERE, Goldfmith, near the Head of Dr. Clarke's Wharf, Bofton. All Perfons who have had falfe Teeth fixt by Mr. John Baker, Surgeon-Dentift, and they have got loofe (as they will in Time) may have them faftened by the above, who learnt the Method of fixing them from Mr. Baker."

The Dentists of Long Ago.

No doubt there were "dentifts" in the town of "Bofton" long before Paul Revere inserted this interesting advertisement in "The Gazette;" that early and now invaluable paper from which so much is learned that is interesting and often amusing about the customs of the people of the Boston and New England of that day. No doubt the work of the dentists of that day was pretty crude, and it is certain that they could not have turned out the work of the dentists of our own time. It is to be hoped that they possessed a sense of humor, that invaluable gift to one living in an environment of groans and howls, for it is sadly true, as some one has long ago said, that our teeth "come with a yell and go with a howl." The howls were probably more frequent in the days when Paul Revere was a Boston dentist, for then there were no anaesthetics to send one into merciful unconsciousness during the painful process of extracting teeth. People fought shy of the anaesthetic when it was first discovered, and some of them may have had the feeling of a stout negro woman of our own time who appeared in a dental room with the bulging jaw and woebegone look with which every dentist must be familiar. Knowing that the process of extracting the troublesome tooth would be a painful one, the dentist suggested to his patient that she take gas, to which she said with decision:

"No, sah, no sah, yo' don't git dis chile to tek none oh yo' gas en walk out ob dis chair daid when her tooth is out—no sah!"

Nothing could convince her that she would not be in danger of walking "daid" out of the operating chair if she inhaled "dat ole gas."

Another negro woman once went to the office of this same dentist and she was willing and even eager to have her sufferings lessened by the use of gas, but when told that the cost would be $2 she demurred, and said:

"Two dollahs jess fo' de little gas I'd smell in to have a tooth out? Why, doctah, dat's mo'n I pays fo' all de gas I uses in my house in three months. Sholy I couldn't smell in $2 wuf ob gas in jess a couple ob minutes, cheap as gas is now."

She was greatly surprised to know that the gas she would "smell in" was not illuminating gas, and was quite relieved to make this discovery, declaring that there was probably less danger of her "blowing up" if she used the dentist's gas.

Borrowed Her Aunt's False Teeth.

A verdant appearing young woman went to the office of a dentist and said that she wanted a "depression" taken for a full set of upper false teeth. When she was seated in his chair and he was making an examination of her very generous mouth he discovered that she was already in possession of a very ill-fitting set of teeth.

"Why," he said, "who ever made such an ill-fitting set of teeth as these? I don't see how you ever keep them in your mouth."

"Oh, la, these ain't mine," she drawled out, "they're my aunt's. She just let me have the loan of them to wear downtown."

"An extremely absentminded patient of mine told me a very funny story regarding the first time he ever wore a set of upper false teeth I had made for him," said a Boston dentist to a friend. "He was riding downtown in an electric car in which every seat was taken, so that there were many to witness his mortification. He was so entirely absorbed in a book he was reading that he was oblivious to his surroundings and when some small irritating particle made its presence felt under the plate of his teeth he simply removed the teeth and went on reading with the plate held in full view between his thumb and finger. He had taken a nickel from his pocket for his fare before sitting down to have it in readiness for the conductor, and he had the nickel in the same hand in which he was holding up his teeth. With his eyes still fixed on his book he sought to drop the teeth into the hand of the conductor when that worthy came down the aisle with the usual cry of 'Fare, fare!' Not until the grinning conductor had said, 'I don't want your teeth!' did he discover the appalling absurdity of his situation. Then he dropped the plate into his pocket and decided that the air was better out on the front platform, where he was in too thoughtful a frame of mind to disobey the injunction, 'Do not talk to the motorman.'

Sad Results of Gum Chewing.

"Another amusing experience I once had coming to my notice," said this same dentist, "was that of a patient of mine for whom I had made a plate on which there were five or six teeth. He was a lawyer with an office three or four blocks from mine. One day, soon after he began to wear the plate, he came hurrying into my office with his handkerchief held over his mouth. When he removed it I discovered that his mouth was wide open and that he presented a most ludicrous appearance. The power of speech seemed to have left him and he pointed in silence to his open mouth.

"I got him into my chair and at once discovered that his plate of teeth had become 'criss cross,' or 'whopper jawed,' in such a way that it pinned his tongue down so that he could not use it. I had some little difficulty in removing the teeth, and when I had done so I said:

"'How in the world did that happen?'

"'Spruce gum,' he said laconically. I had a wad of it in my mouth. It was new and awfully sticky and all of a sudden it jerked my teeth around like that, and I nearly choked to death before I got here.'"

A woman living in the country had for some time been buying her butter of a woman living not far distant. The butter was delivered by the maker's little girl, Mary. The butter was always sent in neat half pound pats, prettily ornamented. One day the lady said to the little girl:

"Mary, how does your mother ornament her butter so prettily? She must have some new kind of a butter print."

"No, ma'am," said the little girl. "She does it with her false teeth."

The story is not a new one of the Irishman who came to a doctor in real distress and wanted relief "immajiately." When asked the cause of his trouble, he said:

"Oi've swallyed me false tathe, an' they kape bitin' me iv'ry sthep Oi tek!"

Embarrassing beyond all words was the position of a woman who was the victim of a most violent and unexpected sneeze in church—a sneeze that sent an entire set of upper teeth flying directly into the collection plate of the usher standing at the head of the [illegible]

AURORA'S AMBITION

From the New York Sun.

That was no joke which emanated from Aurora, Mo., not long since about the removal thither of the national capital. At least Aurora, unlike the boy who put the bent pin in the teacher's chair, did not mean it for a joke, and if it is a joke Aurora, like the tortured teacher, failed to see the point. Aurora has a noble ambition to be not only the capital of the Ozarks, but the capital of the United States, and that its ambition is unconquerable, indomitable, there is the evidence of new doings to bring the 85,000,000 or so of the people of the United States around to the way of thinking of the 6,500 odd Aurorans or Aurorians.

Aurora, Lawrence county, Mo., is the full address of this ambitious aspirant for capital honors, and for the benefit of any one who may desire to locate it on the map it may be added that Lawrence county is in southwestern Missouri. About one fifth of the inhabitants of the county live in Aurora, where they support themselves principally by lead and zinc mining and farming, according to the gazetteers. In the intervals they read one or all of the three local newspapers and talk about the time when they will be the nub and at the hub of things. The present generation expects to witness the great removal. Parsons Elliott, "a millionaire mine owner," according to the St. Louis Republic, was quoted as saying recently: "I will live to see it." It might be pointed out that the assertion of Mr. Elliott was rather an avowal on his part of a personal and present intention to survive to a green old age than a prophetic statement regarding "it," but it would not be safe to say so in Aurora.

The plan at present is to convert Missouri to the Aurora idea and then use Missouri to bring the rest of the country around. Accordingly, "a committee representing the commercial organizations of Mount Vernon, Pierce City, Aurora, Scotia City and Monett, who are behind the [illegible] went [illegible] to St. [illegible] week to invite the members of the St. Louis business organizations and the prominent professional men of that city to visit Aurora, look over the site of the proposed national capital and be convinced by the arguments on the spot. "Nearly $10,000" has been raised in Aurora to entertain the St. Louis junketers for "as long as they wish to remain in Lawrence county," and the only provision in the invitation is that "no citizen must take a cent of money with him when he leaves St. Louis." The invitations to the St. Louisans are "engraved on steel plates, inlaid with silver," and every one of the visitors will receive "a souvenir steel engraving of the national capitol as it would appear in Capital park at Aurora after completion."

When the conquest of St. Louis, and thereby the rest of Missouri, is completed Aurora will move on Congress with a demand that the proposition to transfer the seat of government from Washington to the Ozarks be submitted to the people. If we owned real estate in Washington we would not be in a hurry to sell it, however, nor to buy corner lots in Aurora, on the strength of Aurora's [illegible]

Little Cuckoo Sparrow's Exciting Experience

By Maud Walker

Cuckoo Sparrow was not very old, and, having been but a short time out of his mother's nest, he was perhaps more venturesome than wise. One day, noticing some tall church spires and buildings a long distance away from the grove of trees in which he lived, he conceived the idea of going to them and satisfying his curiosity concerning them.

But before starting for the town—for town it was where the church spires and buildings were—Cuckoo Sparrow went to the tree where his mother lived and told her of his intended journey.

"Now, my dear, foolish son," said Mrs. Sparrow, holding up a warning wing, "don't do anything so rash. There are many dangers in that strange place, and many a venturesome bird who has gone there never returned. Great beings without wings walk about on long legs and have for nests those immense things built on the ground. Take your mother's advice and be satisfied to live a happy, uneventful life in this protecting forest, where food in plenty abounds, where soft winds come to swing us to sleep every night in our nests and where the sun smiles through the leaves at early morning just as we begin our morning songs."

But Cuckoo Sparrow, like many another wayward bird, shook his little head, flipped his tail and flapped his wings as he said:

"Now, mamma dear, you are a bit old-fashioned and stay-in-nest. But I am young, brave and full of curiosity to see the world. I know you mean well, but"—

Cuckoo Sparrow did not finish the sentence in words, but from the way in which he turned his little, round head to one side, cocked up his eye, lifted his tail and folded his wings Mrs. Mamma Sparrow knew full well what he meant.

"Well," she sighed, "if you insist on going I cannot prevent it, for ever since you left my nest and found your own food you have been your own master. All I can say is that you go in opposition to my wish."

"Now, mamma dear, you must not take so gloomy a view of my going forth into the world," said Cuckoo Sparrow. "When I return you will be glad I went, for you will have the pleasure of hearing about all the strange sights I shall have seen and of my thrilling adventures. So now adieu. I am off."

And Cuckoo Sparrow lifted his strong young wing and soared off toward the town, about a mile distant, while his poor mother sat watching him with anxiety in her heart.

It did not take Cuckoo Sparrow so long to cover the distance as it would take a boy or girl to do so, and after about 10 minutes flying he perched himself on the very top of a tall church spire and began to look about him in the streets below. There were strange beings darting hither and thither, some disappearing inside those immense nests his mother had spoken of, while others kept coming forth from other nests. Some of these nests were much larger than others and all were placed in rows.

Cuckoo Sparrow did not know that these "large nests" were houses and that the "strange beings" darting about, in and out of them, were people. But such was the case.

After Cuckoo Sparrow had seen all he could from long range, without harm to himself, he became desirous of getting a closer peep into one of those big nests. "I'll just fly about and see if I can find an opening in the top of one of them," he said to himself. Pretty soon he alighted on the top of a chimney that erected itself above the sharp comb of a two-story dwelling house. "Ah, ha!" said Cuckoo Sparrow, peeping down into the dark hole that seemed to be bottomless, "what have we here? I do belive, upon my gizzard, that this opening leads inside this big nest. As I hear no sound nor see no light, I think I'll just take a dip down and explore the place below." And so saying, Cuckoo Sparrow dropped, head first, down the black [illegible] chimney into a long, winding way that led through the thick wall of the house.

He soon found himself at bottom, and such a black, dirty place it was, all filled with queer stuff that rattled whenever he moved about. Then he could see through a crack into a larger space where were assembled a number of the immense beings he had seen walking about on the long legs, darting hither and thither. As one of those beings came quite close to Cuckoo Sparrow's hiding-place the little fellow became frightened and decided to get away as fast as he could. But when he looked about for the opening through which he had flown down he could see nothing but inky blackness. Then he ran about his small prison, striking his body against the noise-making mess of strange, rustling stuff which filled the floor of his quarters. It was this noise that caused certain sudden developments in the case of Cuckoo Sparrow.

Now, the place wherein the self-imprisoned bird was hopping about so frantically, seeking some door of escape, was nothing other than a fireplace which, not then being in use, was half filled with refuse in the shape of old papers. It was this which made the rustling noise, and the rustling noise caught the ear of a big boy who was in the room.

"Hist!" cried the big boy, going near to the fireplace which was closed by a perforated sheetiron cover. "I do believe there is a bird in the grate. Hey, there, kids, go shut all the doors in the room and close the windows! I'll let him out in the room and then we'll catch him. We can put him in the old dead mockingbird's cage."

Several boys and girls who had been addressed as "kids" ran and closed the windows and doors. Then the big boy took the iron shield from the grate and out flew the startled Cuckoo Sparrow. Round and round the room he darted, his little heart palpitating with fear, for all those awful beings were frantically chasing after him.

And how he did struggle to keep his freedom, even after the children had cruelly exhausted him and lay rough hands upon him. But his fighting was of no avail, for one hand of the big boy closed over his quivering little body and held him fast.

"Git the cage," the big boy cried. And the other boys and a girl ran wildly from the room to obey. In a few minutes they came rushing back with a rusty bird prison—that goes by the name of cage. Into this horrid wired thing the big boy put the wayward little Cuckoo Sparrow, who now wished with all his heart that he had not disobeyed his wise old mother. All the scenes of his happy life—happy up till the present hour—passed across his mind's eye, and he sat, drooping and heavy hearted, in a corner of his prison.

For several days he moped in the cage, refusing to eat and drinking only when his thirst forced him to do so. And all the time those horrible beings (horrible to him)—those boys and the girl—stood about his prison, sticking their fingers through the bars to poke him up, some saying "I guess he's sick; he won't eat nor sing," and others saying "Well, if he dies, we'll feed him to the cat."

At last, on the fourth day of his captivity, company in the form of a woman and a little girl came to visit at the home of his jailers, and for once Cuckoo Sparrow's tormentors let him alone in their excitement over the arrival of company. Late in the afternoon the visiting little girl saw the unhappy captive in the cage. She went to him and began to talk to him in her sweet, sympathetic voice. "Poor Birdie," she said; "you are pining your life away in that cage. It is cruel to keep you here, and if you'll make use of the opportunity I am now going to give you, it will not be many minutes before you are in the trees and sky again. Ah, here is an open window in the room! I'll set your cage near it for just a second, then open your door, and—well, you'll understand the rest. But we must be quick, for I've slipped away from the children who caught you, and very shortly they'll find me. So—here goes!"

As the little girl said this she lifted the cage from the hook from which it hung near the window, placed it on the open window ledge, opened the cage door and said "Shoo! Fly home again."

It did not take a second bidding, and almost before you could wink an eye poor Cuckoo Sparrow was going through the air on very, very weak wings toward his home, in the distant green grove. Once or twice the half starved fellow was forced to light in the grass and gobble up a worm, for he found his strength had given way during his unhappy imprisonment, and some nourishment was quite necessary before he could reach his home.

A little later he darted into the great protecting tree where his mother sat, bowed down with grief, for she was mourning her beloved, though wayward, son as dead.

"I'm home again, mamma, dear," chirped Cuckoo Sparrow, alighting on the limb beside her. "And, what is more, I mean to stay here, too."

Then the dear Mrs. Sparrow reared her pretty head, opened her throat and sent forth the most joyous and thrilling melody she had ever sung. And when her neighbors heard the rapturous music they understood the cause, and they joined in the anthem of Mrs. Sparrow's thanksgiving till the woods rang and rang again.

And when they all assembled to welcome the truant home again Cuckoo Sparrow told of his terrible experiences in the prison within one of those huge nests where dwell the strange, big beings that have no wings and walk on very, very long legs.

Opened the door and said "Shoo! Fly home again."

A Potato Menagerie.

There is much fun for little ones in making a potato menagerie. Take half a dozen large, solid potatoes and after carefully peeling them cut animals from them. The only tool necessary is a good, sharp penknife. It requires some practice to become a skilful "potato-cutter," but the trouble is well rewarded after the boy or girl sees his collection of animals placed in a nice row on a table in front of him. There should be an elephant, a giraffe, a hippo, a horse, a lion, a cow, a bear, a hog, a cat and a dog.

After completing the menagerie the animals may be colored with water colors and ink. A hog may be left potato color save for spots made of ink. The giraffe is also left the natural potato color and spotted with ink.

It is quite surprising how lifelike these little animals will look, and they will keep for many days in good condition.

ANNIE JAMES.

Pearlo, Prince of the Province of Pomo A Fairy Story, by Helena Davis.

Once upon a time there was a boy who did not believe in fairies. This was a great many years ago, so many, in fact, that we do not know the year, for it was the age before histories were written. But the story of this little boy's experiences was found written on a tablet of stone that was buried under the centuries' accumulated debris.

The story, translated into English, follows:

Now, there lived in the Province of Pomo a little boy 12 years of age. His father was but a poor shepherd, who minded his flocks on the mountainside, near a beautiful lake.

One day the poor shepherd fell ill and sent his little son—by name Mizzah—to watch the flock from going astray. As Mizzah sat on the mountainside in the warm sunshine he became drowsy, and stretching himself on the green grass he fell into a deep sleep. While he slumbered thus a thief crept down over the mountainside and drove away Mizzah's flock, taking it deep into the forest, where other thieves waited to help him get the sheep out of the province altogether, a distance of five leagues.

Pretty soon Mizzah awoke and looked about him for the flock, but not a sheep was in sight. Becoming anxious, the little fellow jumped to his feet and ran up the mountainside, calling to his flock, as his father was wont to do [illegible] the [illegible]. But in vain did M[illegible] search for his flock, no [illegible] of [illegible] did he [illegible].

Then he sank to the ground and began to weep, for he feared to go home and tell his parents of his careless[illegible] in neglecting the duty he was set to [illegible]. As he was thus engaged a low [illegible] fell upon his ear, and [illegible] his face [illegible] his hands he [illegible] a [illegible] glittering object in the sand a few feet [illegible] it [illegible] clear as crystal and glistened as a dewdrop glistens when the sun shines full upon it.

"I am a fairy," spoke the voice, soft as the wind and like the music of a lark. This voice startled Mizzah, for it seemed to come direct from the radiant object at his feet. "Do you believe in fairies?" the voice questioned.

"No, I do not believe in fairies," replied Mizzah. "All my life I have heard of them, but I have never, never seen one."

"And must you see to believe?" the voice asked.

"What a foolish question," replied Mizzah. "But what are you that can talk, and are the shape of a tiny pebble?"

"I am Pearlo, Prince of this Province," replied the voice. "For thousands of years before people came to inhabit this mountainside I was prince of the fairies that dwelt here, but the human family have driven many of my people away, and those who remain seek safety in hiding themselves in the forms of pearls, flowers and butterflies."

"I don't believe you are a fairy," declared Mizzah. Then bethinking him of the lost flock of sheep he sprang up, crying: "If you are a fairy tell me where my sheep have wandered. Just an hour ago they were here, but now no sign of their whereabouts can I find."

"If I guide you to your sheep will you then believe in fairies?" asked the [illegible] voice.

"Yes, if you lead me to my flock and assist me in driving them home I shall believe all that you say, for then you will have given me proof of your fairy power," exclaimed Mizzah eagerly.

"It shall be as you desire," the voice [illegible]. "And the only reward I ask for [illegible] you to [illegible] that you believe in me and my power, and that [illegible] you [illegible] a man and have [illegible] [illegible] wicked [illegible] them the truth concerning fairies."

"Not only shall I teach my sons and daughters, when I have them, to believe in fairies, but during all the years that must pass before I am a man I shall tell of your power as a fairy prince if you but bring back my father's flock," declared Mizzah.

"All shall be well with your poor father's flock," promised Prince Pearlo, of the Province of Pomo. Then of a sudden a veil like mist fell before Mizzah's eyes, and when, after a few minutes, it melted away there stood a handsome youthful prince, clad in purple velvet and golden ornaments, before Mizzah.

Mizzah's eyes looked for the pearl-like pebble that had spoken, but it had disappeared. The Prince, understanding Mizzah's astonishment, smiled and said: "Blow, winds, blow!" Immediately the winds came sweeping over the mountainside, then the Prince waved his arm about his head, called out in a clear tone "assemble!" Suddenly a flock of butterflies filled the air, swarming about the Prince and Mizzah. "Go," ordered Prince Pearlo, "to the lower side of yon hill over by the lake: surround the thieves who drove away this boy's flock of sheep and bring them back, sheep and thieves." Then turning to Mizzah the Prince continued to speak as the butterflies went off through the air in the direction designated by the Prince. "Those butterflies will surround the thieves who have your sheep, then they will change their forms to those of men, and, with glittering swords drawn from their sheaths, they will take the thieves captive and bring to you your flock of sheep."

Then the Prince sat down on a big stone, motioning Mizzah to a place beside him. In a few minutes they saw coming over the faraway hillside the flock of sheep being driven by four black-browed, evil-looking [illegible] who were forced to co[illegible] against their will by a [illegible] strong knights in armor, who carried swords and battle axes.

"Why," gasped [illegible] "those are our sheep! But where did all these splendid soldiers come from?"

"Twenty minutes ago you saw those same fine knights in armor flying about here in the form of butterflies," replied the Prince. "Now do you believe in fairies?"

Mizzah grasped the hands of Prince Pearlo and bowed low over them, kissing the Prince's brow affectionately. "Yes, yes, fairy Prince," he exclaimed. "I do believe in fairies. You are wonderful, and as good as you are [illegible]! What would have become of me had our flock been taken from us? We must surely have starved."

At this minute the flock, driven by the four thieves who were guarded by the five knights in armor came up the mountainside. "Oh, Prince Pearlo of the Province of Pomo," spoke one of the knights, bowing low before the prince; "here are the thieves, and here also is the flock belonging to your young companion."

"You have performed your duty well and quickly, sir knights," [illegible] Prince Pearlo. "Now you may sit you down and [illegible] all I have dealt with [illegible] wicked [illegible] deserves to be dealt with." Then turning to Mizzah he asked: "Since these evil men have attempted to rob your honest and hard-working parents, and, seeing as I do that this is their hundredth offense, what punishment do you suggest shall be meted out to them?"

For a moment Mizzah hesitated, thinking earnestly over the question put to him. At last he said: "Oh, good Prince of Pomo, since you have the power to change butterflies into splendid knights, mayhap you can change these thieves to stone, that I may see them every day on the mountainside as a reminder of the day when I so far neglected my duty to my flock and fell asleep, thus giving the thieves a chance to come in and steal our sheep. And I may also point to the four big stones and tell the people of the village the story of their miraculous appearance here."

"A very wise suggestion," exclaimed the Prince. "And after these thieves have become stone they will no longer be a menace to the people of the Province of Pomo. So it shall be as you say."

Even as he finished speaking Prince Pearlo waved a tiny wand above his head. A mist again came over Mizzah's eyes, and as he passed his hands across them to rub away the strange, mysterious veil he heard a low groan fall from the lips of the four thieves. Then his vision became clear again, and there, in a group—rudely thrown together—were four huge bowlders on the spot where the black-browed, evil-doing thieves had stood.

Then, turning to speak to the Prince, Mizzah, to his great astonishment, saw that he, with his knights, had disappeared, and nothing remained on the mountainside save Mizzah and his flock.

And when Mizzah told the strange story in the village at the foot of the mountain he pointed to the great pile of bowlders as proof of the truth of his story, for otherwise the people would have doubted him, saying it was all a child's dream.

And so it came about that the people all came to believe in fairies, and from that day to this the mysterious workings of Prince Pearlo's descendants are felt among the dwellers in the Province of Pomo, the land where the fig trees bloom and the grapes purple under the sun.

There stood a handsome, youthful Prince.

IRISH WIT.

An Irishman, brought before the justice of the peace on a charge of vagrancy, was thus questioned:

"What trade do you follow?"

"Shure, yer honor, I'm a sailor," Pat made answer.

"What—you a seafaring man? I doubt whether you were ever at sea in your life," exclaimed the irate justice.

"Shure, and does yer honor think I came over from Ireland in a wagin?" grinned Pat.

An Irishman who had blistered his fingers by endeavoring to draw on a pair of new boots, threw them aside, exclaiming: "Faiure, an' I'll niver be able to git 'em on till I've worn 'em a day or two."

A SKETCH OF THE EARLY LIFE OF THE POET, JOAQUIN MILLER.

BY MARY GRAHAM.

"Joaquin" Miller whose real name is C[illegible] Hiner Miller was born in I[illegible] in the year 1841. In 1850 he went with his father to Oregon and for a time worked on a farm there. This marked the beginning of a wild Western life, full of change and adventure for the boy "Cin" Miller.

While still a boy in his teens he [illegible] and found the life of a fa[illegible] too confining and uneventful for him. At 16 years of age he journeyed on foot to California, where he found employment as a miner. But that [illegible] ness of spirit, that longing for change which for so many years [illegible] his strange life, took hold on him [illegible] again and he left California to become one of that band of adventurers that followed Walker to Nicaragua. Then he joined a tribe of Central American Indians and lived with them for almost four years, a hazardous and most exciting life, a life of hardship, privation and [illegible].

At the age of 20 he returned to Oregon and began the study of law. CLASS AND COMMENCEMENT FROCKS

Italian Filet and Dutch Neck.

THE POSSIBILITIES OF NET.

MADEMOISELLE'S SUMMER OVERCOAT.

The Charm of Dainty Simplicity Apparent—Lace, Embroideries and Hand-work Run Riot—Class Colors and Emblems at the Dressmakers.

The College Girl. It is her day. And the School Girl. It is hers, likewise! Class and commencement days, with their many exercises and reunions, their peculiar little ceremonies and amusements, call for frocks for the girls and a change of toilette for the visitors that are bound to tax the dressmakers to their wits' ends.

Fortunately for the girl whose time and opportunity for consultation with the dressmaker are limited, there are some charming little frocks to be had ready-made in the shops, and for which a very moderate price—all things considered—is asked.

Those specialists who cater to the juveniles exclusively are showing the most delightful confections! Indeed, no other word seems possible or adequate to describe the extreme daintiness of those simple little frocks.

Daintiness and simplicity are the prevailing attributes upon which Dame Fashion beams most cordially. One French woman who has a large establishment just off Fifth avenue—there are some 25 girls in her embroidery department alone—and who absolutely refuses to take an order for anything beyond the 18-year styles, says, wisely enough: "Our girls will all of them become grown-up [illegible] all too soon. Let us keep them girls, in appearance, at least, just as long as we possibly can. There is nothing so sad to my eyes as to see a girl of 16 or 18 stiffly corsetted and tricked out in garments that look as though she had borrowed them from her mother's wardrobe. One imagines that her mind and her ideas are fully as sophisticated as her dress indicates, and that all the delightful and innocent beliefs and delusions of girlhood have been put away with her girlish frocks."

[illegible] year, as never before, is the home dressmaker and the skilled seamstress right in the front of the procession. These soft and sheer materials that are really de rigueur cry aloud for handwork, and there is hardly any limit to the amount of this that may be lavished upon even the simplest little frock.

These so-called bebe princess frocks—they are really but a blouse and a skirt, closely joined together with rows of shirring at the waistline, these rows extending for about two inches above and below the waist—are [illegible] ful for the very tall and slender girl, she of the willowy figure, and all of that grace which intelligent gymnasium work accords.

Another equally fetching design is practically made upon the same principle, but there is a ceinture of irregular shape and fanciful stitcheries used to connect the two pieces, and on this item much thought and elaboration are lavished. The [illegible] Swiss belt works in delightfully in this connection, and so far it has the decided merit of not being found in the ready-made.

The introduction of the deep girdle has made possible all sorts and descriptions of [illegible] and [illegible], which [illegible] with a certain amount of [illegible] and [illegible] to the cut, but never to the point of an ill-fitting sloppiness [illegible] are decidedly flattering to the [illegible] awkward angles of the immature figure.

built upon the featherboned lining, while the elder graduate—she who is just emerging from her teens or has just left them behind her—will find those taped and featherboned frames that lace invisibly in front prove delightfully serviceable. These are separate, and the sash is built directly upon the frame, lacing snugly to the lines of the figure.

One must realize that for all of these simple little frocks lace must be purchased by the mile, almost, rather than by the yard. Retailers report that they are unable to secure reorders upon the narrower Valenciennes, Mechlin and Cluny laces; and so, if a sufficient quantity be not purchased at the start, disappointment is more than likely to ensue.

That little square Dutch neck—or, as they term it more prettily abroad, the St. Cecilia—is to be quite a feature of the summer frocks; and where this is not followed the guimpe takes its place. Indeed, to such an extent has the vogue of the guimpe attained that one can purchase the most delightfully dainty ones in sheer nainsook, all hand made, in sizes up to and including 36 chest measure. The 15-year-old girl is supposed to have attained at least this width of chest measurement; and with these there are fetching half sleeves shown, either permanently attached or so made that they are joined to the sleeve with snap and ball fasteners.

Linens maintain all of the prestige that has been theirs for quite a few seasons now; but the later fashions are turning altogether in the direction of handkerchief weaves, batiste, the finest of nainsook, and the semi-transparent production of the loom suggest chiffon in their fineness and finish.

While the simplicity of outline is imperative, there is no embargo whatsoever as to the amount of detail that may be lavished upon them. Tuckings are made a thousand and one uses of, and bands of straight shirred material are cleverly joined together with entre-deux and fancy stitches to form flounces, sleeves and even whole blouses and skirts. This idea is charmingly expressed in an imported frock. The blouse is made with a deep square neck, a separate lingerie chemisette being provided en suite, and the shirred bands are broad at the shoulders, tapering each prettily toward the waist and affording a long and slender line that is [illegible] to a degree. The puffed sleeve is similarly constructed, and the skirt follows the line of the blouse to below the knee, where the motif is reversed, and the shirred bands with entre-deux and fancy fagotting make a deep flounce that is smartly in the back.

Surplice waists with the fronts cut in long scarf ends, the ends being [illegible] and brought around the waist to tie in the back, are another effective item in the commencement frocks. Usually there is a cleverly fitted ceinture of some kind that hugs the waist closely beneath the fichu ends. The idea is doubly effective when the skirt is built up in corselet or princess fashion; and the two styles are radically different, albeit the titles are accepted as interchangeable by the average [illegible], the [illegible] of the surplice [illegible] making for a good effect across the bust and the built-up skirt defining the waistline [illegible].

Snake and serpent designs are [illegible] themselves prominently in the jewelry world. Bracelets after this form are coiling the arm; [illegible] favor the [illegible] and [illegible]

The Lingerie Craze.

Some Pretty Fads and Fashions in this Dainty Mode—The Lingerie Chapeau Resumes its Triumphant Career.

There is not even the slightest hint of wane to the vogue of the lingerie craze. Indeed, so much to the contrary is the state of affairs that the shops are inundated with requests for patterns and materials, the fancy-work counters are piled high with sheer linens and nainsooks, all stamped ready to work; and the waist, hat and parasol departments are displaying the finish [illegible] designs and workmanship enough to make even the stingiest person that ever was pull out a purse and pay the price cheerfully—provided, of course, that the purse contain it.

The most striking thing about all of this is that the women of today are devoting their skill and their needles to articles intended for their own use and adornment, rather than for household purposes. Where formerly the women of leisure executed marvels of stitchery in the way of centerpieces and doilies, sofa [illegible] and table covers, today [illegible] is making lingerie blouses, [illegible], parasol covers, and even hats!

The big department stores—always keenly alive to opportunity—have skilled needlewomen at the fancy-work counters, who are engaged to instruct the [illegible] in the working of the different stitches displayed. It is only necessary to purchase the materials there, and the instruction is supplied gratis. And the wonder of it is that the cut of the articles so stamped and ready for working is absolutely above reproach.

Sheer handkerchief linen and batiste, the finest of French nainsook, are displayed ready for the embroidery. One can have a choice of [illegible] of the [illegible] stitches of the [illegible], and [illegible] of these are of such character as to favor a rapid execution.

Since fashion demands an absolutely [illegible] and novel appearance, the [illegible] for [illegible] is one that the manufacturer can hardly keep [illegible] with. One clever [illegible] that she has had to hire three bright [illegible] to fill [illegible] her [illegible] located at one of the [illegible] starts in, it is the guimpe that will be relied upon to furnish [illegible] and coolness at the same time. Many of the guimpe patterns are so arranged that there is a very fanciful undersleeve included in the design, this bringing the whole toilette into better accord.

While the half-sleeve has things pretty well all its own way on this side of the Atlantic, it is to be noted that the [illegible] expensive of Paris importations [illegible] a full-length sleeve, and this with a little cuff arrangement that oftentimes comes well down over the knuckles. There is not a shadow of a doubt but that the summer days will prove the long glove too close and uncomfortable to be borne; and the coolness of the lingerie sleeve, with a short lisle or silk glove, will be highly [illegible] by those who [illegible] comfort [illegible] of appearances.

The lingerie parasol is [illegible] in such bewildering profusion that to [illegible] a scant catalogue of its [illegible] a vain [illegible] the [illegible] transparent of handkerchief [illegible] up to the stout German butcher weave, there [illegible] to be nothing left unattempted. Coarse and heavy embroideries that stand out in bold relief, the [illegible] and dainty [illegible] of baby embroideries [illegible] to view their perfection; solid and blind work, [illegible], lace and net [illegible] there is simply no [illegible] to the variety; it is just one [illegible] of you pay your [illegible] and take your [illegible].

In the parasol [illegible] and [illegible] of the lingerie chapeau, which a scalloped and buttonholed pattern is provided, it were as well to do this work with a little tiny feather-stitch cording tucked [illegible] to the [illegible]. This not only [illegible] for a better finish, but also gives the [illegible] more stability in both [illegible] and cutting away the material from the design.

The lingerie hat is [illegible] to accord with that [illegible] which characterizes the [illegible]. But [illegible] always, the simplicity is [illegible] what misleading, since one [illegible] costly [illegible] and [illegible] laces [illegible] with exquisite ribbons and French flowers. One [illegible] have a really and truly [illegible] chapeau—if you are a skilled [illegible] you, or—for a couple of dollars; or one may purchase one [illegible] for a [illegible]

Description of Illustrations.

Italian Filet and Dutch Neck.

There is a [illegible] about this essentially simple little frock that cannot fail to [illegible]

Three tiny tucks are run between the [illegible]

The Possibilities of Net.

Even the simplest of cotton nets will make up charmingly, if only allowed sufficient trimming, and some taste be used in construction. The original of this eminently girlish little gown is in white Brussels net, with an embroidered silken polka dot closely spaced. But one of the point d'esprits will answer fully as well for those who do not care to undertake the expense of the silken gossamer. It is in the ribbon trimmings, and their effective disposal that the cachet of the frock lies. The waist is cut with a round decolletage in front, and a deep V point in the back—this illustrating one of the latest features of fashion. A ruching of satin ribbon is run, tucker fashion, inside against the skin, and a ladder of narrow ribbon serves to connect this ruche with the lace-edged frill of the net, which but barely hints at a bertha effect. A deep ceinture of the palest of pink satin sash ribbon is closely swathed [illegible] the [illegible] to fasten in one of the [illegible] in front. The [illegible] simplicity itself, the fulness at the top adjusted by means of lengthwise tucks, and three flounces, each edged with a fancy footing, and trimmed with double rows of narrow satin ribbon, are [illegible] from knee to hem. Anything [illegible] simple cannot be [illegible], which [illegible] be made up in silk net and silken foundations; in the cotton [illegible] with a [illegible] slip and petticoat.

[illegible] Summer Overcoat.

The [illegible] of a separate wrap for [illegible] that will be equally [illegible] for [illegible] use as well as for driving, [illegible] little trips out of town and to the [illegible]. It is quite the thing in society [illegible] to attend the various race meetings and to wear one's best bib and tucker thereto—is something of a problem to the average girl. The charming design of the picture shows an excellent model, in one of those off shades of white that it is hard to tell whether they are pearl, gray or lavender, for hints of each tint display themselves, and the [illegible] satin finish of the broadcloth aiding in the play of color. There is a bias fold down the center of the back, the side seams are extremely widely gored, and the fronts hang full circular folds [illegible] the shoulder. The arm eye is large, to admit of a fluffy sleeve beneath, and the coat sleeve loose throughout. The coat is collarless, the throat hardly requiring protection in the summer weather, and the fronts are rolled back in pointed but shallow revers. A quaint and really convenient item is the Capuchine hood that is attached at the back; [illegible] full and with a ribbon draw string to dispose of the fulness. The hood may be drawn up over the head when desired, and a charming effect is gained in this wise, to say nothing at all of the comfort attained. For those who plan to copy this delightful model at home it is suggested that the cuff and revers be interlined with haircloth rather than canvas, the former material being lighter and eminently [illegible] in [illegible].

In the [illegible] Class.

The [illegible] of [illegible] simplicity [illegible] this dainty little frock, every stitch of which is taken by hand. The materials are a sheer white organdie and one of the finer platte Normandie laces that are so [illegible] when well chosen. [illegible] the [illegible] of this little frock is by no means [illegible], [illegible] about 30 inches wide and runs up to $1 or $1 [illegible] the yard, but for the [illegible] who do not like to divest their [illegible] [illegible]

MORE MARK TWAIN STORIES.

From Harper's Weekly.

In his early Hartford days Mark Twain took an active interest in baseball in common with most of his fellow citizens. While attending an exciting match he lost a gold-headed umbrella, which he advertised in the local papers somewhat after this fashion:

"Lost—$10 reward. A gold-headed umbrella was lost by the undersigned on the grandstand at the baseball ground on Saturday. It was probably stolen from him while he was engaged in cheering the Hartfords for their victory over the Providence nine—presumably stolen by a red-headed, freckle-faced boy about 12 years old. For the body of the boy and the umbrella delivered at my house on Farmington avenue, $10 will be paid. For the body of the boy or the umbrella separately, $5 for either. For the boy alive, nothing under any circumstances." This advertisement was signed with his full name and address.

At a dinner given by some local mercantile or business organization, Mr. Clemens responded to the toast of "Hartford." In his speech he glorified the city as one place in the world which provided for every possible human need. He said that Hartford wrote life insurance policies to protect their persons and fire insurance policies to protect their future. It made guns and pistols with which to kill men, but printed books to tell them how to live and Bibles to tell them how to die. In short, it supplied all their needs, not only here, but even hereafter.

When Rev. Dr. Smith, president of Trinity college, a warm personal friend, was hesitating as to accepting a call to a western bishopric, Mr. Clemens ended the matter of discussion, closing by suggesting a form of letter to send to the diocese which he would guarantee would prevent his being troubled with future calls of the same nature. This formula was: "Dear Brethren of the Diocese of —: I have received your call to be your bishop. In reply, I will say that I would see you d—d first."

PENITENTIARY RECORD.

Senator Scott of West Virginia had a candidate for office in his state and pushed him vigorously at the White house. The opponents of Scott's man dug up the fact that he was not so exemplary a citizen as he might be, and had a record. The president would not think of appointing such a man and told Scott so. Later the president sent in the nomination of Ben Daniels of Arizona, and wrote the famous letter excusing Daniels for having been in the penitentiary for stealing a mule. Scott went to the White house and said: "Mr. President, you refused to appoint my man, but it seems to me that you did it without proper investigation. You have underestimated his worth and qualifications." "How so?" asked the president. "Why, you have nominated Ben Daniels. All well and good, but my man is twice as worthy as your man. Daniels was in the penitentiary only once, and my man was in twice."

Where the Game Trout Bites---Season Opens June 1

It can be truthfully said that there is no place in America where the attractions are so many and diversified as in the mountains of Colorado. They are not controlled by corporations nor syndicates. They are open to rich and poor alike. Those who seek luxury may find it, but under the shelter of the pines any man may find a resting place, and for him the streams will sing as merrily as for the millionaire. Many of these are along the South Park line of the Colorado & Southern railroad—in Platte canon, at Bailey's, and at other more spots. Others are on the Frying Pan, along the Colorado Midland, and the Eagle river, along the Denver & Rio Grande railway. For those who can spend a week or ten days from the rush and rumble of life there are dream spots along the Gunnison river and throughout the San Luis valley region.

As to fishing places, the best ones, of course, are those farthest from the railroads, as being hardest to reach, they are less fished.

The following are some of the good fishing points which are not near a railroad:

Trappers lake, the source of the north fork of the White river, about forty-five miles north of Glenwood Springs, is reached by trail from Glenwood Springs. There is no one living there, but there are some empty cabins, so visitors must provide themselves with food and sleeping facilities. Beginning in the river about four miles below the lake, and for thirty miles down the stream, the fishing is good—all native trout, in lake and stream. The fish are so numerous in the lake that it requires neither luck nor skill to catch them.

W. L. Pattison, at the mouth of Fawn creek on the north fork of the White river, twenty miles below Trappers Lake, keeps a good stopping place for fishermen and hunters. Pattison's postoffice address is Buford, Colorado.

Levi Ward has a similar place on the south fork of the White river, where there is also good fishing and hunting. His address, also, is Buford.

The two last mentioned places are most easily reached by wagon road from New Castle, going across the White river plateau to the forks of the White river at Buford, about forty miles from New Castle, thence by wagon road to either place. Fishing is also good at Buford on the main White river.

Piney creek, by wagon road about twelve miles north of Wolcott station on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, is also a good fishing stream. Native trout.

At Antelope Park, on the Rio Grande river, twenty miles above Creede, there is a fishing club, composed largely of Denver men. They have a large club house. Fifteen miles west of this club house are the Lost lakes, where are cottages and boats, and the fishing is good. Rainbows, brooks and natives.

Twin Lakes, near Leadville, but easiest reached from Granite, are not very far from the railroad, but they are not visited by many outside fishermen, as the fishing there is mostly done from rowboats, and the boatmen charge the same price for rowing as they do for working in a mine, viz., $3.50 a day, and that with 50 cents for a boat, makes fishing there pretty expensive. It is not near so good as it was four or five years ago, as there has been no restocking, and a good many fish have been taken out, but there are lots of large fish yet in the lower lake.

The lower Twin lake contains more varieties of fish than any other lake in Colorado, or, perhaps, in the Rocky mountain region. There are the native (or mountain), rainbow, brook, Macdonald, Mackinaw, Lochleven and the German brown trout—seven varieties of trout, also the land-locked salmon, and plenty of suckers on which all the others feed—[illegible] kinds of fish.

The Mackinaw trout are often confused with the land-locked salmon, but the former have white spots on a dark ground, while the salmon have dark spots or splotches on a light ground. There is also some difference in conformation. They were both planted there about twenty-four years ago. The rainbows, brooks, Lochlevens and German browns were planted later.

The Macdonald or yellowfin is native to Twin Lakes and perhaps other lakes in the upper part of the Arkansas river drainage, and is seldom if ever found anywhere else, not even in the streams. It was discovered in Twin Lakes about twenty-five years ago by Jordan and Evermann of the United States Fish Commission, and named by them after Macdonald, who was then the chief of that bureau.

The indications now are that the streams on the western slope will be late in clearing up, as there is a great deal of snow in the mountains. On the eastern slope the prospect is some better, but I think there will not be much clear water before July, except in the lakes, which are always clear.

—Judge D. C. Beaman, in George's Weekly.

SAYS INJUSTICE HAS BEEN DONE PHYSICIAN

PUEBLO, May 26.—The hospital committee of the board of county commissioners in a report to the board yesterday declared that the recent grand jury did a great injustice to Dr. F. W. CRIPPLE CREEK MINING REVIEW

STRIKE ON THE LITTLE CLARA CLAIM IS ONE OF THE GREATEST IN HISTORY OF COLORADO.

Special to The Gazette:

CRIPPLE CREEK, May 26.—The magnitude of the Marsh, Knight and Hodges' strike in the Little Clara claim of the Work company on Raven hill is simply stupendous and undoubtedly has never before been equaled in the Cripple Creek district nor perhaps in the entire state of Colorado. The ore is being mined at a depth of 500 feet some 2,000 feet from the portal through the Ophelia or Moffat tunnel.

These lessees drove an upraise sixty feet where a flat vein was encountered. This immense body of ore has been prospected and opened up for a distance of 100 feet east and 120 feet west from this upraise, making the shoot have a width of 220 feet. The ore has an average thickness of nine feet and is giving values in carload lots, without much sorting of from two to five ounces, with an occasional high-grade shipment that runs from $200 to $300 a ton. The like of this big shoot is unknown to the oldest prospector and miner in the Cripple Creek district. At the present time Messrs. Marsh, Knight and Hodges are employing three machine drills and are getting out a tonnage of about 1,000 tons per month. The tonnage however, will be materially increased within a very short time. No other lease in the camp has ever returned the amount of money to the operators as the Little Clara promises to do.

Hammond & Company, operating on the 500-foot level through the old Granite shaft on Battle mountain, have opened up a nice body of ore and are making occasional shipments, which are giving returns of nearly two ounces in gold to the ton.

The lessees operating on the 900-foot level of the Gold Coin shaft of the Granite company have opened up about three feet of ore in an old stope and are now working regular shipments, which are giving returns of about four ounces. The returns on the last carload went $78 in gold to the ton. Considerable muck and supposedly waste had been left in this stope and the present lessees were induced to go in and work it over. This they did and made a little money. After this ore had been shipped a nice looking vein was exposed and they took hold with the result that they are shipping out a fine grade of rock.

A company of Pittsburg capitalists has made a trial shipment of low grade from a property which they have been working for the past six months on the summit of Little Bull mountain. This ore is being mined from a big eruptive dyke, and is the first to be produced and shipped. The veins which have been opened up in this section are quite similar to those found on Bull hill and which have made many men rich.

Becker, Travell and associates, operating on the Christmas on Bull hill, yesterday sent out a car of ore that will likely give returns of $25 in gold to the ton. So far this month this lease has shipped four cars and half as many will be sent out before close of May. The ore is being mined at a depth of 700 feet where about three feet of rock of a pay quality is being mined.

Morrison & Company, leasing on the Silver Tip claim of the United Gold Mines company on Bull hill, have opened up several feet of ore about thirty feet north of the shaft on the new or bottom level, which is 160 feet deep. These lessees expect to ship out four cars of ore before the close of the month, which will give an average value of not less than $25 in gold to the ton. This lease is improving in the amount of ore and the quantity as development work progresses.

H. D. Anstie, who holds a lease on the Clara D. claim of the Lexington company on Gold hill, will start operations through the old main working shaft about June 1. This shaft is on the north end of the property. Mr. Anstie, who is perhaps the largest individual stockholder in this company will conduct the operations on his own account. He was quite successful in taking out ore on the south end of the Clara D.

The Stewart Leasing company, which has been operating on the Dexter property on Bull hill for several months past, have forfeited the lease and General Manager W. E. C. Little, for the Dexter company, has given a lease on the property to Henry Dahl, manager of the Ophir on Raven hill, who is also leasing on the Ophir, and the Jennie Sample. Mr. Dahl started operations on the Dexter today. There are several veins opened in the Dexter in different levels. The shaft on the Dexter has been sunk to a depth of 600 feet and eventually it will probably be sunk another lift by Lessee Dahl.

Schumer & Company, working on the Lone Jack claim on Gold hill, found an outcropping and have now sunk on the vein for a depth of twenty feet. The values started at $5 and have now increased to $15. Sinking will be continued until a depth of 100 feet is attained when crosscutting will be started.

T. S. Bennett is sinking a shaft on the Lulu B. on the west slope of Straub mountain. The shaft is now down to a depth of 100 feet and sinking will be continued for an indefinite period. Bennett is being financed by Colorado Springs people. He will start a crosscut at the 100 foot point for a vein which was exposed in a shaft which caved in several years ago. If the vein is relocated and gives proper returns a tunnel will be driven from Wilson creek. It is possible that a cyanide mill may be erected.

Fred French, operating on the Trachyte of the U. G. M. company on Bull hill, has made his second shipment from the new north and south vein very recently discovered at a depth of 200 feet. The first shipment netted $38 in gold to the ton and the second shipment will run as well if not better. Mr. French is breaking about three feet of good-paying rock.

Lambright and associates are shipping out a carload of ore a day from the Beacon Hill Ajax on Beacon hill, conducting operations through the Chance of '94 shaft. The new double compartment shaft has just been sunk to a depth of 300 feet and work has been started to drive a crosscut west eighty feet to cut the ore shoot, which is giving returns of $50 a ton in car lots. This is one of the best leases in the camp. The El Paso Consolidated company owns the claim.

RICH STRIKE AT IDAHO SPRINGS

GREAT BODY OF MINERAL IS OPENED WHILE DRIVING ON SHAFTER VEIN—A RECORD BREAKER.

IDAHO SPRINGS, Colo., May 26.—Probably one of the biggest and richest bodies of ore ever opened in the Idaho Springs district has been penetrated by the lateral being driven west on the Shafter vein from the Central tunnel.

A thorough sampling, made after several specimen assays had indicated remarkable results, was made by Manager A. H. Reilly today, with the results that most astonishing values were disclosed. The heading of the lateral is now driving through a four and one-half-foot streak of ore carrying 3.08 ounces gold and 1.6 ounces silver, or a gross value of $62.98 per ton.

In driving the drift over twenty-five tons of this ore is being broken every day, having a gross value of over $1,500. The ore is being taken to the Hudson mill where it will be treated by amalgamation, the loss being so small in milling as not to exceed the smelting rate.

The face of the lateral is now below the fifth level east from the Shafter shaft, and the ore body just opened is believed to be the same ore shoot which was over 200 feet long in the fifth level, and should be considerably larger at an additional depth of 200 feet.

NEVADA STOCKS BARRED

Brokers Defeat Listing of These Stocks Two to One.

Nevada mining stocks will not be listed on the Colorado Springs Mining exchange. This decision was reached by the members Saturday noon, after the call. A motion favoring a special list for the Nevada stocks, was presented, but was defeated by a vote of two to one.

S. S. Bernard, D. N. Heizer, J. H. Avery, F. J. Hobbs and J. W. Wright were placed in nomination to fill the vacancies among the active members on the governing board, they receiving the required number of votes to qualify. J. A. Hayes, Frank F. Castello and A. G. Sharp qualified as candidates for associate members, of which there are two vacancies. The election will occur Saturday, June 9.

WANTS INTEREST IN A RICH LEASE

CORDER, CLAIMING THE LITTLE CLARA LEASE IS WORTH A MILLION, SUES FOR HIS SHARE.

CRIPPLE CREEK, May 26.—E. A. Corder instituted suit in the district court today against F. R. Marsh, E. J. Knight, August Talbot and John and Richard Hodges to recover a one-eighth non-assessable interest in the lease on the Little Clara claim on Raven hill.

Plaintiff claims that his interest was turned over to the defendants through misrepresentation, he having been told, according to the complaint, that there was no ore of value in the mine.

Corder asserts that the lease is worth $1,000,000. He says $50,000 worth of ore has been taken out and that $25,000 worth of mineral is now showing in the property.

The Little Clara is one of the most productive mines in the district. About 1,000 tons of ore is being sent out each month, which, it is said, averages $100 per ton. One of the largest ore bodies ever opened in the district is now exposed on the Little Clara.

ORE IS WORTH $6,000 PER TON

REMARKABLE VALUES IN A SMALL STREAK OPENED IN THE KEY WEST PROPERTY.

GEORGETOWN, Colo., May 26.—Exceptionally high grade ore was encountered in the Key West lode yesterday afternoon. The property is situated within sight of town on Leavenworth mountain, and is operated by E. W. Shepard in connection with the McKinley group.

The streak is small at present, averaging about two inches in width, and assays 2,458 ounces in silver and 212 ounces in gold per ton, being worth nearly $6,000 per ton in both metals. The property is situated in what is known as the gold belt, and will no doubt, with development, prove to be a winner, as the early shipments of ore from this mine have all carried high gold and silver values.

Alongside of this streak is a large streak of mineralized quartz which is liable to become solid as development progresses.

CONDITIONS HOPEFUL

Exposure of Grafting Practices Regarded as a Good Sign.

NEW YORK, May 26.—The exposures of grafting practices amongst Pennsylvania officials brought out by the inquiry were of notable influence in the depression and paralysis of speculative interest in stocks early in the week. The affect on public confidence in the The effect on public confidence in the as was also the likelihood that the agitation against railroads would be stimulated and cause damage to values of their securities.

When prices turned upward professional sentiment adopted the view that exposure would work the cure of harmful practices and benefit the earning power of the companies. Sentiment over the money outlook was in a similar state and came to a conclusion of a hopeful view.

Crop news is watched with an increasing interest in the stock market and the breaking of the drouth in the southwest has been of appreciable benefit to stocks.

EXCESSIVE RAINS CAUSE OF GAINS

DAMAGE REPORTS FROM THE NORTHWEST CAUSE GENERAL ADVANCE IN CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, May 26.—The excessive rains in the northwest and reports of a probable heavy frost in that district turned the strength today in the local wheat market, the July option closing at a net gain of 1-4@3-8. Corn was up 1-2, oats were up 3-8 and provisions were a shade higher to five cents lower.

Trading in the wheat pit was not active, but the tone of the market was strong all day. A slight reaction took place immediately following the opening, because of selling by pit traders who were influenced by lower cables and additional rain in the southwest. The depression vanished immediately when several leading commission houses commenced to buy wheat. The upturn was the result of the report of the weather bureau which announced general rains throughout the spring wheat territory. Many of these advices were to the effect that serious damage would probably result, as the wheat fields of Minnesota are inundated. Late in the day the market was further strengthened by a report from Minnesota which said that there was likelihood of a heavy frost tonight in Minnesota and the Dakotas. The market closed strong. July opened 1-8 higher at 83 1-4, sold off to 82 7-8@83 and advanced to 83 5-8. The close was 83 3-8@1-2.

Despite liberal local receipts, the corn market was strong all day, on a good demand by commission houses and cash buyers. Aside from this buying the strength of wheat was the chief bullish influence. The market closed strong with prices close to the highest of the day. July opened 1-8 to 1-4 higher at 47 1-4 to 47 3-8, advanced to 47 5-8@3-4 and closed at 47 5-8.

Oats were strong all day on a good demand by cash houses and numerous reports of damage by drought. The market was also influenced by the strength of other grains. The bulk of trading was in the September delivery. July opened 1-8 to 1-8@1-4 higher at 33 1-4 to 33 1-4@3-8, sold up to 33 3-4 and closed at 33 1-2. Local receipts were 187 cars.

The provisions market was inclined to be weak because of a five to ten-cent decline in the price of live hogs. There was some liquidation by small holders and a moderate amount of selling by local packers. Trading was of small volume. At the close July pork was off five cents at $16.20. Lard was a shade lower at $8.75@$8.77 1-2. Ribs were a shade higher at 9.30@$9.32 1-2.

PRICES FADED AT MARKETS CLOSE

WALL STREET TRADING WAS NARROW AND HIGHLY PROFESSIONAL—CLOSING TONE EASY.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Traders who bought stocks on the rise yesterday sold today to even up their contracts over Sunday, that was about all there was to the market, which was narrow and professional to the last degree.

The pressure on prices relaxed to some extent after the first hour under the influence of the firm tone in Pennsylvania, which did not share in the weakness of the general market. Prices faded away again in the closing dealings and in some instances ended at the lowest with the tone easy.

The bank return showed a weakened position and had an unfavorable effect on speculative sentiment. The surplus over the legal requirement was shown to be $6,694,150. This compares with a surplus of $11,465,800 at this time last year and of $29,692,325 two years ago. Subscriptions fall due next Tuesday to the $50,000,000 of Pennsylvania notes and there are other syndicate requirements to be met later in the week. The usual month-end necessities are also to be met. The possibility of a flurry in call money next week was therefore kept in view. There were quite emphatic disclaimers of some of the rumors yesterday of a great corporation in prospect for taking over the coal companies from the railroads in order to comply with the law. These rumors caused buying of stocks yesterday.

The money and exchange markets were nominal as usual on Saturday. The Imperial bank of Germany ... a strong return and the Berlin discount rate was easier.
